American Ship Is Reported Torpedoed

NEY YORK, June 28–(AP) Mackay radio said tonight it received a message from the American export liner Excalibur that its radio had intercepted messages reporting the torpedoing of an American vessel, the Edgehill, and the steamship Empire Toucan, which was unidentified. These two terse messages were received from the Excalibur at Mackay's marine department here: "United States steamship Edgehill, 4927N, 1525W, torpedoed 2225 28th." "SS Empire Toucan, 492ON, 1352W, torpedoed 0315, 29th." Battles in the streets of Cernauti, in the area yielded by Rumania to Soviet Russia, and the thrust of Russian troops past the limits of the ceded territory, brought the breath of war close to the Balkans today (Saturday) along with the threat of a rupture in German - Soviet relations.

While talk of German-British peace grew louder, Germany resumed last night and today her aerial bombardment of the British isles, and killed twenty-nine persons in the channel islands. The British struck at German positions on the French coast.

But the rumble in southeastern Europe "took the play" away from their sparring.

Communist and anti-Communist citizens battled in Cernauti, Bessarabia, before the Red army got there yesterday. The army used tanks to crash through street barricades, and finally killed off the anti-Communists who had fled to housetops to conduct a sniping campaign.

Many Russian troops were reported killed at an undisclosed point on the border of Bessarabia when Rumanian soldiers fired at those who were continuing past the agreed limits of ceded Bessarabia and northern Bucovina.

NEW YORK, June 28 (AP)—Editor and publisher, newspaper trade magazine, said today that aides of President Roosevelt, "moving in utmost secrecy," have proposed a government publicity program "to begin functioning if danger of involvement in the conflict becomes more pronounced."

Candidate for Vice President May Not Campaign Actively

WASHINGTON, June 28 (AP)—Senators Charles L. McNary, reluctantly drafted for the Republican nomination for vice president but proud of the honor, said today that he wanted to campaign by 'staying on the job" in the Senate.

The veteran Oregon senator pleaded with the convention leaders by telephone to see that he was not nominated, but when they insisted that the delegates wanted him on the ticket he agreed to accept.

"I wish they'd impose the chore on somebody else but I'll be a good soldier and do the best I can," he told reporters who sought him out in his office to tell him of his top-heavy majority in the first convention ballot.

Never Met Willkie

McNary disclosed that he had "never met" Wendell L. Willkie, utility leader who will top the Republican ticket.

"I don't think I have ever seen him but he's an excellent candidate and the convention has prepared a very good platform," he said. "The ticket should be successful in November.

"Mr. Willkie is an unusual executive, a high type business man, and ought to make an excellent administrator."

The Republican senator said his nomination had not changed his view that Congress should remain continuously in session.

"I've made no plans except that I shall remain here in the senate during this emergency," he said.

Reporters pointed out that an active campaign might interfere with these plans.

"Of course, if it's necessary to get in the campaign, I'll go," McNary commented, "but my plans are to remain here on the job."

But British and German Bombers Continue Raids

Heavy Explosions Reported from Southeast Section of England

ENGLAND DEMILITARIZES ALL CHANNEL ISLANDS

Nazis Attack Them Shortly after Official Announcement

LONDON, June 29 (Saturday) (AP)—German planes renewed the bombardment of Britain last night and early today, but a neutral diplomatic source declared, "a peace move is in the air," and predicted any attempted German invasion would await the outcome.

The German air raiders struck at southeast England, where heavy explosions were heard today, after having bombed England's channel islands soon after a British announcement that those outposts were being demilitarized.

All military forces and equipment of the islands were removed last week, along with the civilian populations of the two most important—Jersey and Guernsey — it was disclosed last night.

The islanders, (nearly 150,000 according to latest census figures) carried only light luggage, abandoning their crops and farm animals and shops filled with vavluable stocks. Automobiles were left standing at the wharves.

There was no report on extent of the damage done by German planes, but officials acknowledged that the islands' position between the peninsulas of Normandy and Britanny made them virtually indefensible.

Watchers on the southeast coast of England reported last night the sound of heavy explosions across the channel on the Nazi-held French coast, along with vicious anti- aircraft fire, indicating that the British were continuing to harry German base-builders there.

As for the report of a peace move, the source, who has world-wide contacts, said it was believed that the British position rested on the response of French colonies and the French fleet to the efforts of French General Charles de Gaulle to have Frenchmen fight on for the Allied cause.

The neutral source said that already there was evidence of pressure from Wall street in New York in favor of bringing the European conflict to an end — particularly if a peace that would protect United States markets is foreseen.

He declared that Henry Ford's refusal to manufacture airplane engines for the British probably was influenced by a feeling that there was a possibility for a peace that would leave the Ford factories converted to airplane factories without work.

WILLKIE SAYS NATION FACES A CRUCIAL TEST

Declares He Will Conduct an Aggressive, Fighting Campaign

By RICHARD L. TURNER

CONVENTION HALL, PHILADELPHIA, June 28 (AP)—With the Republican presidential nomination tucked securily in his pocket, Wendell L. Willkie visited the party's national convention in its closing hours today and took it by storm again.

The convention's smiling victor stood before this crowded hall, which had just seen Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon nominated for the vice presidency, and in a speech carrying the heavy emphasis on brevity, pledged himself to the Republican cause.

Last night he stampeded the great gathering—in a pandemonium of pro-Willkie uproar from the galleries—into nominating him as its presidential candidate. Today, his tousled hair covered with confetti, and even a bit sticking to his perspiring cheek, he faced the microphone and said simply:

Most Crucial Test

"Democracy and our way of life is facing the most crucial test it has ever faced in all its long history. x x x

"As your nominee I expect to conduct a crusading, aggressive, fighting campaign to bring unity to America, to bring the unity of labor and capital, agriculture and manufacturer, farmer and worker, and all classes to this great cause of the preservation of freedom.

"So, you Republicans, I call upon you to join me, help me. The cause is great. We must win. We cannot fail if we stand together in one united fight."

The crowds which had cheered an absent hero for four days went wild at the opportunity to applaud their man standing before them. Every sentence of his speech drew its wall-bulging shout, and as last night he captured their votes, today he appeared to capture their loyalty and fighting devotion.

McNary Willkie's Choice

McNary, the lean veteran senator from Oregon, Republican floor leader whom nearly everyone about the capitol calls "Charley or Mac" was Willkie's choice for the vice presidential nomination. And that was enough for the crowd.

From early morning, in fact, the only uncertainty about the vice presidential situation was whether or not McNary would accept. As PHILADELPHIA, June 28. (AP)—This day—the twenty-eighth of June—will always live in the memory of Mrs. Edith Willkie as one of the most momentous of her life.

To her came the tremendous experience of standing, a small slim figure, beside her tall, broad-shouldered husband while 16,000 people roared approval of his selection as the Republican presidential nominee.

Admittedly shy of crowds, she stood on the speaker's platform in the blinding glare of powerful floodlights as the 1940 Republican national convention looked over "the Missus" of the man the party hopes will lead it to victory in the coming campaign.

Colored balloons tumbled from high up in the rafters and confetti rained down. When the yelling slacked for breath, Chairman Joe Martin banged and banged his gavel. The crowd let him speak. "I want to present the lady who will be the next mistress of the White House. "Whee—," screamed the crowd.

Mrs. Willkie had the spotlight.

Bark of Guns Is Germany's Reply To Peace Rumors

Berlin Cold to Suggestion of Possible Overtures from London

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

BERLIN, June 28 (AP)—Iron talk from the mouth of cannon is Germany's answer to the latest flurry of peace rumors.

The Wilhelmstrasse tonight was cold to the suggestion of possible peace overtures from London.

Nazi spokesmen said the Reich hardly could take notice of unauthorized peace soundings at a time when the British government itself is categorically denying peace rumors and demanding a war to the finish.

"That is the war we are giving them," Nazi officials said. "The cannon are speaking."

Started in England

The view was expressed that the peace rumors were started in England for the purpose of giving Prime Minister Churchill and other British leaders a chance to reject with vehemence any suggestion of peace.

In any case, it was emphasized, the only utterance to which Germany can attach any importance at the moment is the official British announcement that the British government is determined to continue the war until victory.

Official quarters also clung to a cool view of the Balkan events, insisting that Germany "has no fears" that the seizure of Bessarabia by Russia may spread the European conflict to Danubian lands.

Evening papers did not mention events in Rumania.

Air Raids Acknowledged

It acknowledged further British air raids against Germany and the German-held Dutch and Belgian coast yesterday and last night, and asserted Nazi planes had bombed armament plants and harbor facilities in southern and central England.

DNB, official news agency, reported that forty-three persons were killed in a British bombing at Den Helder and other Dutch towns.

Nazi newspapers, commenting on the twenty-first anniversary today of the Versailles peace settlement, noted with satisfaction that that "criminal treaty" no longer carried weight in Europe.

A two volume white book, documenting German charges that the Allies, before the German lowlands invasion May 10, were preparing to extend the war, was announced by the foreign office. The Germans say Britain and France were about to use the Netherlands as a springboard for an invasion of the Ruhr.

directly at State Police Corporal Alkire, who had arrested him after he killed Deputy Sheriff Wilbur Grubb on April 14. Hartman pleaded guilty to the crime.

The officer returned the glance unflinchingly from the middle of the audience, watched the guards place the black cap and heard Dr. R. A. Shworth pronounce hartman dead thirteen minutes and ten seconds after he tumbled through the floor.

Until the end the prisoner refused spiritual aid, telling Chaplain Don C. Hindman:

"There's no hereafter anyhow. I don't care."

Later Corporal Alkire said Hartman seemed to "carry rancor into the grave." He said he had talked with the man on Monday when he had displayed no personal feeling but had remarked:

"I blame the public in general for the suffering I've gone through. I especially blame the citizens of Buckhannon—all of them. I only wish any one or all could suffer as I have suffered."

B. & O. Repair Shops Will Be Reopened At Brunswick

BRUNSWICK, Md., June 28 (AP)—The heavy locomotive repair shops of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in Brunswick will be reopened about July 15, making jobs available for about seventy-five men.

Yardmaster M. E. Mullen said about twenty machinists, ten boilermakers and forty-five laborers would be added to the shop force when new heavy machinery and equipment is installed.

It was understood about fifteen heavy locomotives will be served here rather than at the Mount Clare shops in Baltimore or at Cumberland. In the past, heavy engine work has been done in the other two cities, with lighter locomotives being serviced here.

Mullen said furloughed B. & O. railroad employes would be recalled first and that if additional workers were needed they would be hired from sources outside of the company.

Among the nine new machines being installed are a wheel lathe, boring mill, plater, steam hammer, shers and punch.

Mullen said railroad business had been increasing generally since April and that an average of sixty-five engines daily leave the Brunswick yards.

Sen. Norris Says FDR Will Win in Race with Willkie

Flays Republican Candidate Because of Utility Connection

WASHINGTON, June 28 (AP)—Senator Norris (Ind-Neb.) asserted today that the Republican party had assured the re-election of President Roosevelt by nomination of Wendell Willkie.

"Willkie is Insull the second," Norris told reporters. "He is head of a great utility empire. The power trust is behind him and gave him this nomination.

"I don't believe there is a ghost of a chance of Willkie being elected, but he is going to make a great campaign. This same combination that nominated him and deceived the convention is going to try to put him over in November."

Norris has been an advocate of a third-term for President Roosevelt.

Democratic Chairman James A. Farley said that Willkie's nomination put this question before the country: "What sets of forces, economic and social, are to conduct our government—the historic American processes, or some new and somewhat foreign methods of concentrated control?"

Speaker Bankhead, commenting along similar lines, declared that the nomination placed before the voters the issue of whether they wanted "to place the executive in the control of forces which are somewhat foreign to our usual American way of life." Neither he nor Farley elaborated on their statements.

Secretary Ickes, declaring that President Roosevelt would be renominated and reelected, expressed belief that Willkie was now enjoying a popular strength which would soon ebb away.

He said that after the Illinois primary he predicted that Thomas E. Dewey, then regarded as the leading candidate for the Republican nomination, was at the top of his strength.

"I make the same prediction today with respect to Mr. Willkie," Ickes continued. "The difference between Thomas E. Dewey and Wendell Willkie is the difference between a pinwheel and a sky rocket."

Oregon Senator

the convention assembled for an afternoon session which was nearly an hour late in beginning, the buzzing gossip dealt only with McNary's attitude. But word was soon received from Washington that McNary, like a "good soldier would accept," and that was that.

Missouri complimented its only Republican member of Congress, Rep. Dewey Short, by placing him in nomination, but it was a runaway race from the start, and scarcely one which Short took seriously. The final figures were 890 for McNary, 108 for Short, and two for Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire. On Short's motion the nomination was made unanimous.

Word was alredy spread about the hall that Willkie would visit the convention and make a speech. Once, in fact, those near the entrance thought they saw him coming and raised a cheer which spread to the delegates inside. It was a false alarm. Finally, however, he arrived, in a driving storm.

Wildly Welcomed by Crowd

With Mrs. Willkie he waited in an anteroom momentarily and then, preceded by a captain of police, he entered the hall from the rear and began a long, slow procession up the center aisle. Those near the door spotted him first, and started a great clamor that instantaneously spread to every section of the convention and its gallery spectators.

Through the tumult, Mr. and Mrs. Willkie proceeded up the aisle, he smiling and waving, and responding to quickly - snatched hand-shakes from those with aisle seats. Mrs. Willkie had to steady her hat in the jostling. Torn paper fluttered down from the galleries. The outburst made all previous demonstrations of the convention seem puny.

Still with Mrs. Willkie, the nominee climbed to the platform and walked out the long runway leading to the speaker's desk. They stood together while the crowd cheered—she in navy blue, with a small white hat and a corsage of three orchids; he somewhat stopped and characteristically rumpled and windblown. The shouting welled up again.

Chairman Joseph W. Martin gaveled the crowd to silence and introduced:

"The charming lady who will be the next mistress of the White House."

The crowd cheered again. Mrs. Willkie smiled a timid greeting and withdrew.

Then Martin presented the lion of the hour, the man who, he said, meets the "demand for a leader who can seriously tackle these great problems which now confront America."

It was minutes before Willkie, nodding his head jerkily and waving in all directions, could obtain enough silence to make his speech audible.

Rain of Confetti

Down from above came a rain of confetti and scores of red, white and blue balloons. The confetti got in Willkie's hair, in Mrs. Willkie's hat, and in the typwriters of furiously pounding newsmen, seated on both sides of the runway.

Earlier, Willkie held his first press conference as a presidential nominee, and from it these statements emerged:

He would resign from Commonwealth and Southern, vast public utility holding company of which he is president.

The outstanding issues of the campaign would be "national unity, building adequate national defense and rehabilitation of the national economy.

The result of his whirlwind campaign for the nomination was an "expression of the will of the people."

He would be "delighted" to visit President Roosevelt and talk foreign affairs with him.

And he said then what he told the throng in the convention hall, that he would make an aggressive, fighting campaign of it.

Made No Pledges

"I want to say to the members of this convention that as your nominee, I stand before you without a single pledge, promise or understanding of any kind except for the advancement of your cause and the preservation of American democracy," he said.

Her leave-taking was delayed 2½ hours because of the reluctance of seamen to sign on — an outgrowth of the ship's last voyage when she was stopped by a submarine and threatened with destruction.

Officials felt no concern for her safety this time, however, as governments of belligerent nations have been advised of her rescue mission and of her course.

Her sister ship, the Manhattan, also has been ordered to make another repatriation voyage and will sail Monday for Lisbon, Portugal, to pick up 1,200 or more Americans.

tossing of the "liberated" residents.

The Bulgarian newspaper Outru, known as a German mouthpiece, predicted that Germany would "act" if the Russian occupation of Bessarabia extended beyond the Prut river.

Hungary sent her armies marching up to the Rumanian frontier, and official Budapest said that unless Joseph Stalin called the Russians to immediate halt, the Hungarians would keep right on going, with full German and Italian support.

The question of war or peace in jittery southeastern Europe hung by on thread: how far will Russia go into Rumania?

King Carol, watching more of his territory disappear before his very eyes after ordering no opposition to Russia's march into the demanded areas, formally announced general mobilization "to the last man," this, however, actually was effected Thursday.

Hungary Awaiting Chance

Hungary has been awaiting an opportune moment to seize her former Transylvania territory from Rumania, anyway, but now her immediate problem is to halt the Communist sweep toward her borders.

Any Hungarian move in this direction also is likely to embroil Bulgaria, friend of Moscow.

Meanwhile, unofficial London talk of peace and official British declarations of a fight to a finish were accompanied by new British and German air blows at each other.

The British bombed the German-held French coast around Calais and the Nazis blasted at the channel islands shortly after London announced they were to be demilitarized, because of their nearness to the German-held French coast.

"Peace Move in Air"

A neutral diplomatic source in London declared "a peace move is in the air" to end the British-German struggle.

This commentator, with world-wide connections, declared any attempt by Germany to invade British likely would await disposition of the peace efforts, hinging on response of Franch colonies and the French fleet to General Charles de Gaulle's appeal from London to fight on.

Even as Red army legions marched unopposed into Rumania's Bessarabia and Bucovina—and kept going—there were reports that the Kremlon had demanded of Hungary a protectorate over Ukrainian elements in Ruthenia, formerly Eastern Czecho-Slovakia which Hungary grabbed in the break-up of that republic.

Hungarians called the Bucharest reports "typical Rumanian gangsterism" and declared they had received no communication what-soever from Moscow.

Hungary herself was mobilizing her forces apparently to seize long-coveted Transylvania from Rumania, and the prominence given to the latest reported Russian demands in Bucharest might have been designed to stay Hungary's hand.

Turkey Mobilizes Half Million Men

Also Masses Submarines and Warships in the Black Sea

ISTANBUL, June 28. (AP)—Turkey mobilized half a million fierce fighting men and poured both surface warships and sumbarines into the Black sea tonight.

Southeastern Europe stirred with old hates and new ones.

Significantly, the Turkish fleet, followed by a submarine flotilla, was headed north, probably to cruise past the coast of Bulgaria, former segment of the Ottoman empire.

There also were intense troop movements throughout Turkey, mainly in the direction of the Bulgarian frontier.

Aside from this manifest warning to Bulgaria and what might stand behind her, the Turks were taking every precaution to defend their heritage, the Dardanelles, from attack from the east.

Turkey was vitally concerned by Soviet Russia's thrust into Rumania.

Aside from new mobilizations pushing Turkey's men under arms past 500,000, the government was understood to have completed a plan to double that force within tweney-four hours, if need be.

Before the Turkish fleet entered the Black Sea, it was fully fueled and supplied in the Bosporus.

It was headed by the 23,100-ton battle cruiser Yavuz, a product of imperial Germany, Turkey's flagship.

the $11,011,387,000 the United States spent in the first year after its entry into the World War.

Other Developments

Other defense developments of the day included an order from the navy for an immediate start on construction of ten destroyers and nine submarines, estimated to cost $154,577,000 and the first action by Secretary Morgenthau under the broad powers over shipping granted to him yesterday in a proclamation by Mr. Roosevelt.

The treasury secretary set up an office of merchant ship movements, to be directed by Assistant Secretary Herbert Gaston, which will guard against sabotage by exercising closer control over movements of ships in harbors and the handling and loading of explosives and other dangerous cargoes.

Under regulations issued by Morgenthau, port captains will direct how such cargoes are to be handled, and will have authority to search any domestic or foreign vessel and its personnel at any time, place guards on a ship, or remove any person from it.

Nelson left the executive vice president of Sears, Roebuck and Company the first of this month to head the treasury's procurement division.

Authoritative sources reported that the contemplated defense appropriation expansion would be entirely for the army. It was felt, it was said, that needs of the navy would be met, for the time being, by legislation already enacted and the $4,000,000,000 naval bill now pending before the Senate after House passage.

The additional army expansion, it is understood, will include the vast orders for tanks, airplanes and a program of government munitions factories construction.

Hungary Sends Troops Marching To Rumanian Line

Said To Have Promise of Full Support of Germany and Italy

BUDAPEST, June 28 (AP)—Hungary sent her troops marching clear to the Rumanian frontier tonight and official quarters said they would continue across the border with the full support of Germany and Italy if the Russian army of occupation keeps moving toward the Carpathian mountains.

Officials here admitted the continuing Russian advance into old Rumania after occupying ceded Bessarabia and northern Bucovina would change entirely Hungary's attitude heretofore of watchful waiting.

They said Germany, although desirous of keeping Hungary out of war, would certainly give Hungary the go-ahead signal "with full axis support" if the Russians failed to apply the brakes.

The entire question of peace or war in southeastern Europe appeared to hang on how far Russia goes into Rumania.

An open break between Moscow and Berlin seemed a growing possibility over the Rumanian issue.

Hungarian troops were "ordered to advance" tonight, the official news agency said, because of the complicated situation in Rumania. It was explained that this meant that Chausseur troops had been sent up to the line a short distance from the Rumanian frontier.

This illustrated Hungary's worry over reports that Russian troops were continuing their march into old Rumania beyond the limits stipulated in the Soviet ultimatum to which King Carol of Rumania had agreed.

Hungary appeared ready to go into Transylvania, a Rumanian agricultural area formerly Hungary's, at a moment's notice if the Red advance continues.

The inspired press expressed concern, meanwhile, over the welfare of the 1,500,000 Hungarians in Transylvania.

"Don't they need protection?" the papers asked.

Simultaneously War Minister Karoly Bartha called upon Hungarians to quickly provide funds for Red Cross hospital trains, ambulances and medical supplies. He said pointedly:

"I trust you will understand what this appeal is all about."

Rumania got the high plateau of Transylvania from Austra-Hungary during the World War. It is Rumania's largest province, geographically—24,020 square miles, and its second in population, about 3,500,000.

Now that Russia has taken back Rumanian Bessarabia and north Bucovina, nearly every magyar is talking about the return of Transylvania.

The newspapers put it this way: "Nobody can tell whether the Rumanian troops, fleeing from the Russians, will not turn on unprotected peoples; that is, minorities."

Americans May Leave Hongkong

HONGKONG, June 29.—(Saturday)—(AP)—United States authorities, apprehensive at indications of possible trouble between Japan and Great Britain in this crown colony, were expected to decide today whether to remove 1,000 Americans from Hongkong.

British instructions from London indicating pending removal of women and children from the far-eastern British outpost were taken in some quarters to mean that Britain had decided to reject Japan's demand for the closing of the Burma route, over which Japan charges China has been receiving arms.

British authorities disclosed that ships were being held in readiness to take the women and chilcren from the city.

United States officials were said to have asked the state department in Washington for permission to hold the United States liner President Coolidge until further notice. She is due today from San Francisco en route to Manila. Two United States gunboats also are in this section.

Mrs. Willkie

For this great occasion she wore a navy blue crepe dress with white crepe collar and white buttons down the front. Her hat was a close-fitting toque of small white flowers with a navy blue veil in back.

She nodded her head and her lips seemed to form the words "thank you," but the sound was lost in the tumult. Then she went back on the platform to sit with two friends, Mrs. Bruce Bierce of Akron, O., and Eddie McGinnis of Chicago.

Intently she listened and watched, her blue eyes very solemn, as Martin gaveled the crowd to comparative silence and said: "I present the man who will be the next president."

Mrs. Willkie, from her vantage spot, followed her husband's words closely as he promised to conduct "an aggressive and fighting campaign."

In a few minutes it was over and the Willkies were escorted from the hall—but it meant that a woman who has always preferred the background was now in the spotlight.

Rumanians Battle Red Army Troops; Casualties Heavy

King Carol Orders Mobilization "to the Last Man"

BUCHAREST, June 29.—(Saturday)— (AP) —Embattled Rumanian citizens fought Red army troops for hours today in the border of Cernauti as the Russian army of occupation swept into ceded parts of Rumania and moved beyond those areas into old Rumania itself. Scores of civilians were killed and wounded.

The fighting at Cernauti started between Communists and anti-Communists hours before the troops arrived in mid-afternoon and hurled tanks at barricades thrown up in the streets.

After being driven from the streets the anti-Communists took to housetops and sniped at the vanguard of the Russian army marching in to take over territory the Bucharest government handed over in response to Moscow demands.

From before dawn until Russian infantry marched in at 2 p. m. the snipers blazed away. They finally were killed or dispersed.

Many Russians Killed

Many Russians were killed at an undisclosed point on the Bessarabian frontier when Rumanian forces opened up on the Red forces which continued on past the limits of ceded Bessarabia and Bucovina into old Rumania.

King Carol ordered complete mobilization—"to the last man"— effective at midnight and all taxis and private vehicles here disappeared from the streets during the early morning hours.

Cafes and restaurants closed as waiters hastily doffed their aprons and hurried to concentration points to join the 2,000,000 men already under arms in this war-threatened Balkan kingdom.

It was learned that the German legation warned the Rumanian government to increase internal police measures against possible "revolutionary activity by Communists and Jews."

A complicated situation fell on the Rumanian general staff with the revelation that many of Rumania's troops on the Hungarian frontier — another trouble spot—are from ceded Bessarabia.

According to the Russian demands to which King Carol capitulated they must return to their Bessarabian homes as new Russian citizens.

Besides losing some of its best fighters, the general staff must find replacements quickly on the Hungarian frontier, which threatens to develop trouble after Budapest's demands for Transylvania, territory lost to Rumania after the World War.

After taking over Cernauti, a city of 110,000 population, the Russians swept into Dorohio, a town in the province of Moldavia.

As soon as this news seeped out, the Rumanian government filed an urgent appeal with the German minister that Berlin put hard pressure in Moscow to halt the Red advance and force the Russians to retire to the line named in their original, and accepted, demand.

All this was not the end of this unhappy country's troubles.

Budapest informants advised that while Hungarian official quarters were denouncing as "typical Rumanian gangsterism" published reports of a Russian ultimatum to Hungary, a campaign against Rumania was opened in the officially inspired Hungarian press.

The papers there asserted that the Bucharest newspapers had published the story about a Russian ultimatum against Rumania only to alarm the Rumanian people "and make them think that other people are also in trouble."

Alread, this country has lost 4,000,000 people—one fifth of her population—and one fifth of its total area. Of these people, 80,000 are Germans.

Already, Red troops have occupied surrendered sections of Rumania in a political conquest that may yet bring conflict between Germany and Russia.

They marched unopposed into Bessarabia and northern Bucovina, after King Carol's government had ceded those vital areas in yielding to Moscow's ultimatum, while German sources promised that the Nazis "definitely will settle things later on."

But pending that, the move brought unrest to the entire European southeast and Asia Minor.

Turkey Moves Fleet

Bulgaria mobilized. So did Hungary. Rumania balanced their moves on her side of the border. And Turkey moved her fleet through the Dardanelles to the Black Sea under a protective covering of aircraft.

Tonight the officially inspired Rumanian press front-paged as a Budapest dispatch:

"Diplomatic circles here in Budapest said the Moscow government had sent a note to the Hungarian government demanding a protectorate over the Ukrainian elements of Ruthenia. At present no one knows what Hungary will answer to this."

(With Rumania under Hungarian pressure for the return of Transylvania, however, this report, published as it was by Rumania's inspired press, may be intended to deter Hungarian ambitions toward Rumanian territory).

German legation sources here atributed the Russian move to a British plot designed to drive Germany into war on a new front, and declared that Germany would not permit this to come about now.

Nevertheless, they said that Carol's capitulation was only "a temporary adjustment."

Nazis To "Act" If Russians Go Into Ceded Area

Bulgarian Newspaper Says Germany Will Not Permit Invasion

SOFIA, BULGARIA, June 29—(Saturday)— (AP) — The newspaper Outro declared today that Germany would "act" if the Russian army of occupation in Rumania goes beyond the Prut river, on the western edge of ceded Bessarabia.

The newspaper, known as a German mouthpiece, said "it is the desire of Germany" that no further changes take place in the Balkans. It added that the Nazis would "use all efforts to preserve calm."

The Russian army advance into Rumania—beyond the limits of ceded Bessarabia and Bucovina — is to the west of the Prut river.

The Bulgarian council of ministers meanwhile remained in session until early today. At the conclusion of the meeting it issued a brief communique:

"The government's policy remains as it was—non-intervention in the troubles of neighbors."

De Gaulle Heads "Free" Frenchmen

LONDON, June 28 (AP)—Charles De Gaulle, the French general who is here organizing continued resistance against Germany, was recognized by the British government tonight as "leader of all free Frenchmen."

Nevertheless, the diplomatic correspondent of the authoritative British Press Association wrote that it "should not be regarded that diplomatic relations between Britain and the Petain government have been severed."

Striding into the Evening Bulletin office, he thrust his hand across the desk of Editor Dwight Perrin and said: "I'm Willkie."

Startled, Perrin replied with a handshake, and said: "I recognize you from your picture."

Willkie agreed to sit for a photographic portrait and later visited the wirephoto room to see Associated Press wirephotos being transmitted.

He spotted a picture of himself and, evidently referirng to the fact that a presidential nominee is much-photographed, he said:

"I see I'll have to lead a circus spect life."

Other newspapers he visited were the Record and Inquirer.

Bark of Guns Is Germany's Reply To Peace Rumors

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

BERLIN, June 28 (AP)—Iron talk from the mouth of cannon is Germany's answer to the latest flurry of peace rumors.

The Wilhelmstrasse tonight was cold to the suggestion of possible peace overtures from London.

Nazi spokesmen said the Reich hardly could take notice of unauthorized peace soundings at a time when the British government itself is categorically denying peace rumors and demanding a war to the finish.

"That is the war we are giving them," Nazi officials said. "The cannon are speaking."

Started in England

The view was expressed that the peace rumors were started in England for the purpose of giving Prime Minister Churchill and other British leaders a chance to reject with vehemence any suggestion of peace.

In any case, it was emphasized, the only utterance to which Germany can attach any importance at the moment is the official British announcement that the British government is determined to continue the war until victory.

Official quarters also clung to a cool view of the Balkan events, insisting that Germany "has no fears" that the seizure of Bessarabia by Russia may spread the European conflict to Danubian lands.

Evening papers did not mention events in Rumania.

Air Raids Acknowledged

It acknowledged further British air raids against Germany and the German-held Dutch and Belgian coast yesterday and last night, and asserted Nazi planes had bombed armament plants and harbor facilities in southern and central England.

DNB, official news agency, reported that forty-three persons were killed in a British bombing at Den Helder and other Dutch towns.

Nazi newspapers, commenting on the twenty-first anniversary today of the Versailles peace settlement, noted with satisfaction that that "criminal treaty" no longer carried weight in Europe.

A two volume white book, documenting German charges that the Allies, before the German lowlands invasion May 10, were preparing to extend the war, was announced by the foreign office. The Germans say Britain and France were about to use the Netherlands as a springboard for an invasion of the Ruhr.

The officer returned the glance unflinchingly from the middle of the audience, watched the guards place the black cap and heard Dr. R. A. Shworth pronounce hartman dead thirteen minutes and ten seconds after he tumbled through the floor.

Until the end the prisoner refused spiritual aid, telling Chaplain Don C. Hindman:

"There's no hereafter anyhow. I don't care."

Later Corporal Alkire said Hartman seemed to "carry rancor into the grave." He said he had talked with the man on Monday when he had displayed no personal feeling but had remarked:

"I blame the public in general for the suffering I've gone through. I especially blame the citizens of Buckhannon—all of them. I only wish any one or all could suffer as I have suffered."

B. & O. Repair Shops Will Be Reopened At Brunswick

BRUNSWICK, Md., June 28 (AP)—The heavy locomotive repair shops of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in Brunswick will be reopened about July 15, making jobs available for about seventy-five men.

Yardmaster M. E. Mullen said about twenty machinists, ten boilermakers and forty-five laborers would be added to the shop force when new heavy machinery and equipment is installed.

It was understood about fifteen heavy locomotives will be served here rather than at the Mount Clare shops in Baltimore or at Cumberland. In the past, heavy engine work has been done in the other two cities, with lighter locomotives being serviced here.

Mullen said furloughed B. & O. railroad employes would be recalled first and that if additional workers were needed they would be hired from sources outside of the company.

Among the nine new machines being installed are a wheel lathe, boring mill, plater, steam hammer, shers and punch.

Mullen said railroad business had been increasing generally since April and that an average of sixty-five engines daily leave the Brunswick yards.

GALLERY GOES FOR WILLKIE

Sen. Norris Says FDR Will Win in Race with Willkie

Flays Republican Candidate Because of Utility Connection

WASHINGTON, June 28. (AP)—Senator Norris (Ind-Neb.) asserted today that the Republican party had assured the re-election of President Roosevelt by nomination of Wendell Willkie.

"Willkie is Insull the second," Norris told reporters. "He is head of a great utility empire. The power trust was behind him and gave him this nomination.

"I don't believe there is a ghost of a chance of Willkie being elected, but he is going to make a great campaign. This same combination that nominated him and deceived the convention is going to try to put him over in November."

Norris has been an advocate of a third-term for President Roosevelt.

Democratic Chairman James A. Farley said that Willkie's nomination put this question before the country: "What sets of forces, economic and social, are to conduct our government—the historic American processes, or some new and somewhat foreign methods of concentrated control?"

Speaker Bankhead, commenting along similar lines, declared that the nomination placed before the voters the issue of whether they wanted "to place the executive in the control of forces which are somewhat foreign to our usual American way of life." Neither he nor Farley elaborated on their statements.

Secretary Ickes, declaring that President Roosevelt would be renominated and reelected, expressed belief that Willkie was now enjoying a popular strength which would soon ebb away.

He said that after the Illinois primary he predicted that Thomas E. Dewey, then regarded as the leading candidate for the Republican nomination, was at the top of his strength.

"I make the same prediction today with respect to Mr. Willkie," Ickes continued. "The difference between Thomas E. Dewey and Wendell Willkie is the difference between a pinwheel and a sky rocket."

the convention assembled for an afternoon session which was nearly an hour late in beginning, the buzzing gossip dealt only with McNary's attitude. But word was soon received from Washington that McNary, like a "good soldier would accept," and that was that.

Missouri complimented its only Republican member of Congress, Rep. Dewey Short, by placing him in nomination, but it was a runaway race from the start, and scarcely one which Short took seriously. The final figures were 890 for McNary, 108 for Short, and two for Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire. On Short's motion the nomination was made unanimous.

Word was alredy spread about the hall that Willkie "ould visit the convention and make a speech. Once, in fact, those near the entrance thought they saw him coming and raised a cheer which spread to the delegates inside. It was a false alarm. Finally, however, he arrived, in a driving storm.

Turkey was vitally concerned by Soviet Russia's thrust into Rumania.

Aside from new mobilizations pushing Turkey's men under arms past 500,000, the government was understood to have completed a plan to double that force within tweney-four hours, if need be.

Before the Turkish fleet entered the Black Sea, it was fully fueled and supplied in the Bosporus.

It was headed by the 23,100-ton battle cruiser Yavuz, a product of imperial Germany, Turkey's flagship.

the $11,011,387,000 the United States spent in the first year after its entry into the World War.

Other Developments

Other defense developments of the day included an order from the navy for an immediate start on construction of ten destroyers and nine submarines, estimated to cost $154,577,000 and the first action by Secretary Morgenthau under the broad powers over shipping granted to him yesterday in a proclamation by Mr. Roosevelt.

The treasury secretary set up an office of merchant ship movements, to be directed by Assistant Secretary Herbert Gaston, which will guard against sabotage by exercising closer control over movements of ships in harbors and the handling and loading of explosives and other dangerous cargoes.

Under regulations issued by Morgenthau, port captains will direct how such cargoes are to be handled, and will have authority to search any domestic or foreign vessel and its personnel at any time, place guards on a ship, or remove any person from it.

Nelson left the executive vice president of Sears, Roebuck and Company the first of this month to head the treasury's procurement division.

Authoritative sources reported that the contemplated defense appropriation expansion would be entirely for the army. It was felt, it was said, that needs of the navy would be met, for the time being, by legislation already enacted and the $4,000,000,000 naval bill now pending before the Senate after House passage.

The additional army expansion, it is understood, will include the vast orders for tanks, airplanes and a program of government munitions factories construction.

Hungary Sends Troops Marching To Rumanian Line

Said To Have Promise of Full Support of Germany and Italy

BUDAPEST, June 28 (AP)—Hungary sent her troops marching clear to the Rumanian frontier tonight and official quarters said they would continue across the border with the full support of Germany and Italy if the Russian army of occupation keeps moving toward the Carpathian mountains.

Officials here admitted the continuing Russian advance into old Rumania after occupying ceded Bessarabia and northern Bucovina would change entirely Hungary's attitude heretofore of watchful waiting.

They said Germany, although desirous of keeping Hungary out of war, would certainly give Hungary the go-ahead signal "with full axis support" if the Russians failed to apply the brakes.

The entire question of peace or war in southeastern Europe appeared to hang on how far Russia goes into Rumania.

An open break between Moscow and Berlin seemed a growing possibility over the Rumanian issue.

Hungarian troops were "ordered to advance" tonight, the official news agency said, because of the complicated situation in Rumania. It was explained that this meant that Chausseur troops had been sent up to the line a short distance from the Rumanian frontier.

This illustrated Hungary's worry over reports that Russian troops were continuing their march into old Rumania beyond the limits stipulated in the Soviet ultimatum to which King Carol of Rumania had agreed.

Hungary appeared ready to go into Transylvania, a Rumanian agricultural area formerly Hungary's, at a moment's notice if the Red advance continues.

The inspired press expressed concern, meanwhile, over the welfare of the 1,500,000 Hungarians in Transylvania.

"Don't they need protection?" the papers asked.

Simultaneously War Minister Karoly Bartha called upon Hungarians to quickly provide funds for Red Cross hospital trains, ambulances and medical supplies. He said pointedly:

"I trust you will understand what this appeal is all about."

Rumania got the high plateau of Transylvania from Austra-Hungary during the World War. It is Rumania's largest province, geographically—24,020 square miles, and its second in population, about 3,500,000.

Now that Russia has taken back Rumanian Bessarabia and north Bucovina, nearly every magyar is talking about the return of Transylvania.

The newspapers put it this way:

"Nobody can tell whether the Rumanian troops, fleeing from the Russians, will not turn on unprotected peoples; that is, minorities."

Americans May Leave Hongkong

HONGKONG, June 29.—(Saturday)—(AP)—United States authorities, apprehensive at indications of possible trouble between Japan and Great Britain in this crown colony, were expected to decide today whether to remove 1,000 Americans from Hongkong.

British instructions from London indicating pending removal of women and children from the far-eastern British outpost were taken in some quarters to mean that Britain had decided to reject Japan's demand for the closing of the Burma route, over which Japan charges China has been receiving arms.

British authorities disclosed that ships were being held in readiness to take the women and chilcren from the city.

United States officials were said to have asked the state department in Washington for permission to hold the United States liner President Coolidge until further notice. She is due today from San Francisco en route to Manila. Two United States gunboats also are in this section.

For this great occasion she wore a navy blue crepe dress with white crepe collar and white buttons down the front. Her hat was a close-fitting toque of small white flowers with a navy blue veil in back.

She nodded her head and her lips seemed to form the words "thank you," but the sound was lost in the tumult. Then she went back on the platform to sit with two friends, Mrs. Bruce Bierce of Akron, O., and Eddie McGinnis of Chicago.

Intently she listened and watched, her blue eyes very solemn, as Martin gaveled the crowd to comparative silence and said: "I present the man who will be the next president."

Mrs. Willkie, from her vantage spot, followed her husband's words closely as he promised to conduct "an aggressive and fighting campaign."

In a few minutes it was over and the Willkies were escorted from the hall—but it meant that a woman who has always preferred the background was now in the spotlight.

Rumanians Battle Red Army Troops; Casualties Heavy

King Carol Orders Mobilization "to the Last Man"

BUCHAREST, June 29.—(Saturday)— (AP) —Embattled Rumanian citizens fought Red army troops for hours today in the border of Cernauti as the Russian army of occupation swept into ceded parts of Rumania and moved beyond those areas into old Rumania itself. Scores of civilians were killed and wounded.

The fighting at Cernauti started between Communists and anti-Communists hours before the troops arrived in mid-afternoon and hurled tanks at barricades thrown up in the streets.

After being driven from the streets the anti-Communists took to housetops and sniped at the vanguard of the Russian army marching in to take over territory the Bucharest government handed over in response to Moscow demands.

From before dawn until Russian infantry marched in at 2 p. m. the snipers blazed away. They finally were killed or dispersed.

Many Russians Killed

Many Russians were killed at an undisclosed point on the Bessarabian frontier when Rumanian forces opened up on the Red forces which continued on past the limits of ceded Bessarabia and Bucovina into old Rumania.

King Carol ordered complete mobilization—"to the last man"— effective at midnight and all taxis and private vehicles here disappeared from the streets during the early morning hours.

Cafes and restaurants closed as waiters hastily doffed their aprons and hurried to concentration points to join the 2,000,000 men already under arms in this war-threatened Balkan kingdom.

It was learned that the German legation warned the Rumanian government to increase internal police measures against possible "revolutionary activity by Communists and Jews."

A complicated situation fell on the Rumanian general staff with the revelation that many of Rumania's troops on the Hungarian frontier — another trouble spot—are from ceded Bessarabia.

According to the Russian demands to which King Carol capitulated they must return to their Bessarabian homes as new Russian citizens.

Besides losing some of its best fighters, the general staff must find replacements quickly on the Hungarian frontier, which threatens to develop trouble after Budapest's demands for Transylvania, territory lost to Rumania after the World War.

After taking over Cernauti, a city of 110,000 population, the Russians swept into Dorohio, a town in the province of Moldavia.

As soon as this news seeped out, the Rumanian government filed an urgent appeal with the German minister that Berlin put hard pressure in Moscow to halt the Red advance and force the Russians to retire to the line named in their original, and accepted, demand.

All this was not the end of this unhappy country's troubles.

Budapest informants advised that while Hungarian official quarters were denouncing as "typical Rumanian gangsterism" published reports of a Russian ultimatum to Hungary, a campaign against Rumania was opened in the officially inspired Hungarian press.

The papers there asserted that the Bucharest newspapers had published the story about a Russian ultimatum against Rumania only to alarm the Rumanian people "and make them think that other people are also in trouble."

Alread, this country has lost 4,000,000 people—one fifth of her population—and one fifth of its total area. Of these people, 80,000 are Germans.

Already, Red troops have occupied surrendered sections of Rumania in a political conquest that may yet bring conflict between Germany and Russia.

They marched unopposed into Bessarabia and northern Bucovina, after King Carol's government had ceded those vital areas in yielding to Moscow's ultimatum, while German sources promised that the Nazis "definitely will settle things later on."

But pending that, the move brought unrest to the entire European southeast and Asia Minor.

Turkey Moves Fleet

Bulgaria mobilized. So did Hungary. Rumania balanced their moves on her side of the border. And Turkey moved her fleet through the Dardanelles to the Black Sea under a protective covering of aircraft.

Tonight the officially inspired Rumanian press front-paged as a Budapest dispatch:

"Diplomatic circles here in Budapest said the Moscow government had sent a note to the Hungarian government demanding a protectorate over the Ukrainian elements of Ruthenia. At present no one knows what Hungary will answer to this."

(With Rumania under Hungarian pressure for the return of Transylvania, however, this report, published as it was by Rumania's inspired press, may be intended to deter Hungarian ambitions toward Rumanian territory).

German legation sources here atributed the Russian move to a British plot designed to drive Germany into war on a new front, and declared that Germany would not permit this to come about now.

Nevertheless, they said that Carol's capitulation was only "a temporary adjustment."

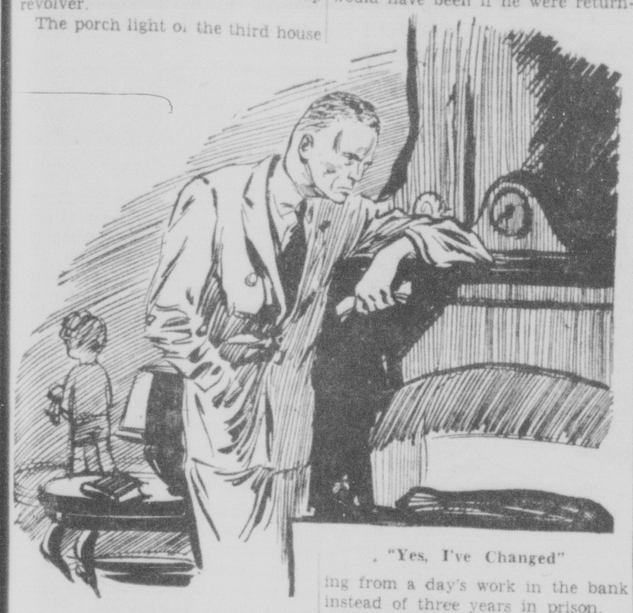
A Man Can Learn a Lot About Hate in Three Years, but It's Nothing to the Love He Can Learn in an Hour

By FRANK BENNETT

It was almost dark when Eddie left the bus at the corner. As he turned slowly and surveyed the familiar surroundings, the street light shone fully on his thin hard face and revealed the cold hate in his eyes. In three years a man can learn to hate terrifyingly. His right hand slipped into a coat pocket and touched the cold steel of a cheap revolver.

The porch light on the third house from the corner burned brightly. When he came to the walk he pulled his hat low and kept his chin down. For some reason he dreaded having Clara see his face and he was sure that Clara would be standing by the window, watching for him, studying him. She'd probably be holding Billy and telling his, "That man is your daddy."

But Clara wasn't at the window, he knew when he stepped up to the partly opened door. She was in the kitchen, rattling pans and humming a little tune. The smell of cooking food filled the air. Things were pretty much the same as they would have been if he were returning from a day's work in the bank instead of three years in prison.



"Yes, I've Changed"

There was a difference, though, for Eddie didn't walk in as he would have done three years ago. He knocked and noticed with a deep bitterness that the paint was peeling off the door casing. He and Clara had always taken a keen pride in their home. He could see through the partly opened door that the hall needed repapering, too.

Then Clara came running toward him, her eyes shining through the tears, her small arms outstretched.

"Eddie," she gasped; then clung to him and sobbed. At last she stopped crying and pulled away. "Eddie, I'm so happy. You've no idea—Eddie, you've changed!"

"Where I've been a man changes," he said quickly. "Three years taken out of my life for a crime I didn't commit. Three years to think about the injustice of it and learn to hate a man with all my soul. Yet, I've changed.

"But, Eddie," Clara's voice was low, trembling, "it was all a horrible mistake. You've got to remember that. It's all over now, and you've got to forget——"

"Yes, it's all over, but it wouldn't be if old Preston's son hadn't been in a car wreck and broken his back. He'd never confessed to taking the money and changing my books if he hadn't known he was going to die."

"But the accident happened, and you're free. It had to happen. A man's sins always find him out."

"Oh, yeah?" Eddie said.

And then 4-year-old Billy came shyly into the room, and father and son eyed each other a little uncertainly.

"You never brought him to see me," Eddie said at last. "In fact, you never came very often yourself."

"Eddie, you know I didn't have the money or the time. I had to work. You wouldn't have wanted us to lose our home."

"No," Eddie said, his eyes roving over the faded paper, "I guess not."

"You're hungry," Clara said suddenly. "While you two boys are getting acquainted, I'll finish dinner. I've made your favorite chocolate cake."

When Eddie sat down at the table he realized that he had been starving for Clara's cooking. For the first time in months his hate lost its importance.

Billy's shyness disappeared and he began to talk. Clara told about her work at the drugstore and how a kind neighbor woman had taken care of the boy.

"Thank goodness that's all over now and I can stay home," she said, slicing the chocolate cake. "I never want to see the inside of a drugstore again."

Eddie remembered the gun in his pocket and felt a little sick. For some reason he had never thought about Clara having to go on working and leaving Billy with a neighbor.

"Three people have offered you jobs," Clara went on. "Mr. Harris and Mrs. Drake, and Mr. Preston want you to come back to the bank."

Mechanically Eddie took a second slice of the cake.

"Oh, Eddie," Clara said softly, her eyes shining, "we've lost only three years. What are three years compared to the time we have ahead of us? When I know I'll have you with me tomorrow and the next day and for years and years, I'm so happy I don't know what to do!"

Suddenly Eddie pushed back from the table. "I've got to think," he choked, stumbling toward the door. "I've got to——"

Clara's face whitened. "What about, Eddie?"

"About which job to take," he flung back at her.

In the back yard was an old well. Eddie remembered how he used to pump water for the flowers in the summertime. Clara always said that well water was better for flowers in the summertime. Clara always said that well water was better for flowers than city water. Breathing heavily he dropped down on the curb. One of the boards was loose. His fingers slipped under it, lifted it a few inches.

Registrar William N. Beetham, who has held the office for sixteen years, is retiring.

He has donated to the college the volumes, mostly dealing with sociological and educational subjects, he has collected in fifty years as an educator in Ohio and West Virginia.

The People Speak and a Real Leader Is Named

IN the midst of a great national crisis accentuated by colossal and costly blunders, the American people have given voice to their wishes, their clarion call has been heeded and a way has been provided toward national rehabilitation and economic sanity in the nomination at Philadelphia by the Republicans of Wendell L. Willkie, of Indiana, as a candidate for president of the United States.

When Representative Charles A. Halleck, of Willkie's home state, placed him in nomination he declared that "he can win in November. He has licked Franklin Roosevelt once; he can lick him again."

Willkie can and Willkie will, but not just because he has "licked Franklin Roosevelt once." It is because he is rarely possessed of the ability and the stamina to execute the tremendous task the people realize must be executed if American ideals, American institutions and the American way of life are to be preserved.

Willkie has been termed the "miracle man." It is an apt designation. To be called to a mighty service so spontaneously and with such unmistakable popular unanimity and widespread confidence is really a phenomenal happening. It is really amazing in view of the fact that he did not seek the office, had neither organization nor financial backing and, while naturally eager to respond to a call to service, was wholly indifferent as to personal consequences.

The reason for this great popular demand is clear. The condition of the country is deplorable and needs to be set aright. Willkie has proved himself in the crucible of hard, practical experience to have the moral and mental equipment deemed necessary in a new and hopeful leadership in a time that has been trying the souls of patriotic citizens. He has had the training, the knowledge and the experience of a skilled manager of production on a large scale. He has the ability to rehabilitate the direful economic situation, to restore jobs and to help business.

Also the man has character as well as personality and that is extremely important. He is fair and generous, always willing and anxious to see and examine the other side of a question, and there is no pettiness nor meanness in his make-up. But one quality shines out brightly in this darkened time and that is his absolute fearlessness. He has demonstrated himself to be a man of courage and that is the kind of man this country needs today.

The selection of Willkie is most opportune because it represents an expression of a philosophy of government in which the masses place their hopes and trust. The man typifies in his career and his viewpoint the thing that has made this country great, and that thing is American opportunity created and developed by private enterprise, which, in the last analysis, means freedom and that is the shibboleth of the American way of life and the American way of thinking.

Willkie will assuredly be elected president in November because, in addition to the reasons heretofore set forth, he commands the respect and confidence not only of Republicans but of millions of independent voters who look beyond partisan considerations to the national welfare as guaged by their personal viewpoint. There are upward of five millions of these independent voters—sufficient to swing any national election, and they have done that in the past. There are all indications that these citizens have become distrustful of the New Deal philosophy, its disappointing results and its dangerous tendencies; and they stand ready and willing to follow a competent leader away from them and in the direction of real security and progress. This competent leader they now have.

Some hidebounders have been just a bit skeptical of the nominee's partisan loyalty by reason of the fact that he was once a Democrat. That, however, should serve only to emphasize, on the one hand, his breadth of mind and, on the other hand, to strengthen faith, as it has on his part, in the soundness and enduring qualities of the political fundamentals of the Republican party.

Wendell Willkie represents the ardent hopes, desires and aspirations of an undoubtedly large segement of a perplexed, disturbed and disappointed people. He must be elected in November. He will be.

Other Changes Should Be Made in Washington

IT is popularly supposed that two of the most capable men in the United States, Messrs Stettinius and Knudsen, have been given power to accomplish the two great tasks of national defense: First, to obtain materials; and second, to turn these materials into defense equipment.

The people believe that not a moment is to be lost in preparing to defend the United States against a terrible power which, after conquering Europe, may attack this hemisphere. But the public is not fully informed that an important cog in the machinery of preparation is Madam Perkins, who holds authority to regulate for certain purposes all corporations holding contracts with the government.

The public is not told that an important cog in the machine is Harry Hopkins, who holds other large powers over business concerns, although he is not a business man but a politician.

Congress is providing a billion dollar tax for national defense; but it is not providing against the creation of commissions, boards, authorities and agencies piled on top of those already existing, and constituting what Franklin D. Roosevelt himself describes as "a chaos of establishments."

When hurried and perplexed, which he is most of the time, Mr. Roosevelt creates another board or commission to "co-ordinate" the chaotic mass of confusion known as the New Deal.

The people are told that new taxes will pay for new defense costs; they are not told that the new billion-dollar tax will fall short of paying the annual interest on the Roosevelt debt. As matters stand, the annual deficit will continue to be not less than $3,000,000,000.

Whatever happens abroad, there can be no assurance of efficient preparation for national defense until a capable administration is installed at Washington.

Our Hope Now Rests With the Engineers

FOR BETTER OR FOR WORSE, for a while or for generations to come, this is to be an engineer's world. The new order that has come up in Europe is one of doers, against which the sayers and the older politicians and the masters of money as such do not prevail. They must be doers, too.

And so must those who reside in the Western Hemisphere, to meet whatever threat the change implies, or to compete with it in the new post-war world.

Among those to whom this nation will look will be such boys as the thousands competing in the National Model Airplane meet now being held in Chicago. Started six years ago in Detroit, these meets have grown yearly and have created great enthusiasm among boys whose imagination has been aroused by flying.

These and others like them will be the boys who presently will become designers of American aircraft, not for war particularly or primarily, but for the services of peaceful transport in which aviation has become a great and indispensable factor. They have the qualities of energy, resource and mechanical intelligence on which there will be a high premium in the years just ahead.

Scientific advancement marching in hand with democratic youth on the Western Hemisphere today offers the only hope for civilization.

Karl Ulmanis, recent president of Latvia, had a steady job as milkman at Lincoln, Nebraska, some years ago—before he returned home to become a statesman—and now, chances are he wishes he had it back.

It is gathered from reports from Hollywood that it would be more entertaining to see a picture (one picture) of John Barrymore being himself while engaged in making a picture than to see the picture he makes.

Stalin is a copycat in a way and in another way he's not. In taking over Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia he didn't say a word about protecting them. He called it "mutual assistance."

The Browser's Findings

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The extraordinary Mr. Upton Sinclair has never been one of the Browser's favorite authors. Perhaps because Sinclair has always been a man with a mission, with a moral purpose in whatever he writes, and has never taken any pains to conceal his preaching tendencies. Some readers like that sort of thing. The Browser, frankly, does not.

Marshall Maslin

The same tendency exists in Sinclair's new novel "World's End" (Viking), but the subject of the story is so powerful that the Browser condescends to forgive the author for both that messianic quality in his writing and for the touch of naivete that is always present in Upton Sinclair.

But the quality of "World's End" is so high that the Browser feels somewhat ashamed of carping criticism. . . Sinclair has painted a tremendous panorama of the years between 1913 and 1919 in Europe and America. His chief character is an extraordinary boy, only thirteen when the book opens, who lives with his mother in France but has friends in Germany and England and a father who is the active sales agent for the family's munition works in America.

The father is an intelligent businessman who sees the world with brutal clarity; the mother is a lovely, loyal, thoroughly feminine person; the boy is a decent European of fine intelligence. And the book is an exhaustive and exciting picture of Europe at war—of its etiquette, its morals, its business, its politics and its decadence.

Businessmen, radicals, diplomats, artists, noblemen, financiers, dilettantes troop across its vast stage. "Bill" Bullitt, Lincoln Steffens, Zaharoff and many other living persons appear in the novel, and it comes to a grand climax with its description of the terrific struggle that took place during the so-called peace negotiations of 1919. . . Today's tragedy is implicit in the remark of a French general who announced in a private salon: "This treaty is turning loose a wounded tiger on the world. He will crawl into a hole and nurse his wounds, and come out hungrier and fiercer than ever."

A delightfully refreshing book is George B. Gilbert's story of "Forty Years a Country Preacher" (Harpers). Pastor Gilbert lives in Connecticut where all this century he has been preaching, marrying, burying, baptizing, cutting hair, chopping wood and even acting as a clearing house for market prices to the farmers of his district.

A gentle, troubled book is "The Long Watch over England" (Holt) by Eugene and Arline Lohrke, who have been living in England for some years on a farm in Sussex. They love the English people but they wrote their book in profound fear that the "bureaucratic incapacity" of England would prove a fatal weakness in time of peril. Events of the past year seem to justify their Cassandra prophecies and nobody will regret it more than the Lohrkes.

The Modern Age's Kauffmann Youth Novel Award of $1,000 scheduled for presentation this month has been postponed to February, 1941—because the jury wants more manuscripts from more writers.

Agnes Newton Keith's "Land below the Wind" is still one of the top non-fiction sellers in the country. (Want to know something? The Browser was never able to finish it).

The English novelist, Phyllis Bottome, has gone home to England, war or no war.

This is the fiftieth anniversary year of Henryk Sienkiewicz' great novel "With Fire and Sword." . . James Norman Hall is living in Boston for a few months. His writing partner, Nordhoff, is still in Tahiti. . . Laura Krey who wrote ". . . and Tell of Time", has finished her second novel, "On the Long Tide."

"How Green Was My Valley" has been THE national best seller for three months, has now sold 135,000 copies. . . A book gloomily prophetic of England's future, it is possible. . . And that's enough from Marsh Maslin,

GOP Convention An Orderly Affair, Johnson Reports

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

PHILADELPHIA, June 28 — One clear impression of this convention is that it is clean and orderly — perhaps too orderly. Maybe the absence of bands has something to do with this, but there appears to be less enthusiasm than is usual in national conventions.

Hugh Johnson

I don't know much about convention backroom methods, but there is less apparent evidence of them than in any convention I have attended. I saw some of the inside baseball that saved the nomination for Mr. Roosevelt in Chicago in 1932. That was partly done through remote control from San Simeon Ranch in California over long distance by Mr. Hearst. Nothing whatever of that kind goes on here.

Fair Chairman

I think this convention takes its even temper and high tone from Joe Martin, its chairman. Unlike most chairmen, that I have seen, he is not using his office to favor anybody and there is so much confidence in his fairness that there is an almost complete absence of soreheads and sullen resentment that sometimes create party wounds that are slow to heal.

Except for some dirty pool played in Mr. Willkie's direction by attempted anonymous smear campaigns and the jealousy of life-long professionals over the astonishing success of this amateur, the party promises to walk out of here in reasonable harmony no matter who is named.

In Deadly Earnest

It is an unbiased convention — even in the state delegations. The shadows across the world are reaching here. Most of the delegates feel their responsibility and are in deadly earnest. They at least seem to be doing their thinking for themselves.

The platform was a typical old-time political job — sloppy and two-faced and, in most clauses, indefinite enough to mean anything and hence to let any selected candidate write his own platform by interpretation. The course ahead of us is too cloudy to chart. Any president of the United States for the next four years is pretty likely to have to operate on a weekly or even daily basis.

More Important

That means to most delegates that the selection of a man is more important than the selection of words and phrases. This fact is largely responsible for the unexpected popularity of Wendell Willkie. In every quality except old time political slickness and in every performance except his lack of an old time political floor team, Mr. Willkie stands head and shoulders above his rivals. It is so hard to argue intelligently to the contrary that if Mr. Willkie had the kind of organization that either Senator Taft or Tom Dewey has, it seems certain that he would be nominated on the second ballot, which is being conducted as this piece is written.

As it is for the moment, it is still anybody's race among the three leaders. Most of the old time political observers of the press, who are wholly impartial, seem to see straws blowing in the direction of Senator Taft.

Congratulations In Order

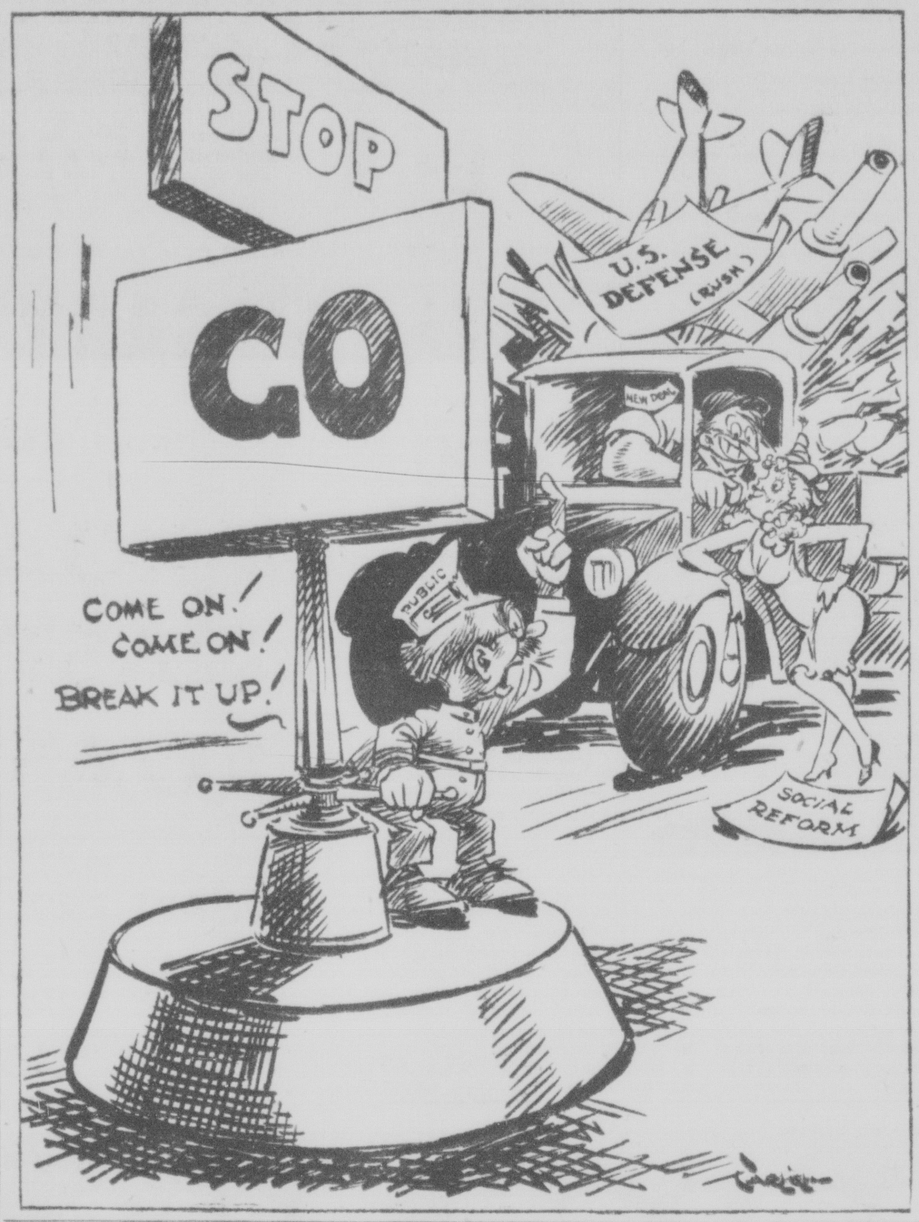
I am not enough of an expert on conventions to question this and I am too strong for Mr. Willkie to trust my own judgment on such a guess. It may probably be decided before this column is printed. Whether he wins or loses, both Mr. Willkie and the American people can congratulate themselves on his splendid showing. It proves that, in this dangerous world, democratic processes are working even more freely than they do in calmer times. His perfomance stands as a shining example of frankness, courage and ability. He suddenly becomes a foremost national figure whose voice will be influential on any national question. If some one else is nominated and does not win, a good many Willkie enthusiasts will feel that the Republican party has missed the bus—maybe the last bus. — Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

PROUDEST MOMENT

Mrs. Wendell Willkie

The camera records the eager expression of Mrs. Wendell Willkie as she watches a demonstration for her husband at the Republicans' Philadelphia convention. Nomination of the Indiana utility man for presidential candidacy brought the convention's biggest ovation.

WHAT'S THE HURRY?



Voice of the People Routs Politicians At GOP Convention, Sullivan Reports

By MARK SULLIVAN

PHILADELPHIA, June 28 — As this is written, the balloting is beginning. Before that, the situation took a definite form. It has permanent importance and it lends itself to analysis, partial at least.

Mark Sullivan

The situation became a feud between the delegates and the gallery crowd — the gallery for Mr. Willkie, the delegates not. Some are translating this into "the people for Willkie, the politicians not." But that does not follow.

To begin: the speech putting Mr. Willkie in nomination was truculent. Made by Congressman Halleck of Indiana, it had an air of saying to the delegates, "you better nominate Willkie, or else— — —"

That the delegates did not like. From them came derisive shouts. Then a Willkie speaker implied that the Willkie movement had had little or no campaign funds, some delegates boo-ed. So that the delegates may be said to have started the row. Quickly the crowd in the galleries began to demonstrate for Mr. Willkie. For an hour or so, it was a case of galleries for Willkie, the delegates sullenly resistant.

Strange Procedure

This was strange, for most of those in the galleries had got their seats from delegates or other politicians. Each delegate had been given a quota of gallery seats, and also each alternate and members of the Republican National Committee. In short, fully half the galleries must have been the same sort of persons as the delegates. It was no Louis XIV case of the peope in the galeries, the aristocrats on the floor.

Yet clearly there was, in the galleries, and in Philadelphia, and throughout the country, a "we want Willkie" spirit. This sentiment, observers say, came not only from business and professional men, but from every walk of life.

How did this sentiment arise? It will be important to find out, for these were persons who said that if this Republican convention failed to heed the demand of the people, there will be serious consequences. They said that the people are fed up with politics, politicians, both political parties, and all political symbols and forms, including even Congress. These persons said that failure of a political party to nominate an outsider, a business man, would feed a mood of the people which is tired of the forms of democratic government.

Genuinely Spontaneous

This Wilkie movement could only reach the people by the usual channels. Some of those channels were, for deeply patriotic reasons, strong for Mr. Wilkie. Magazines, deeply impressed by Mr. Willkie's personality and ability, had given much space to him. Newspapers and newspaper chains had endorsed him. Two well-known columnists, spokesmen of the intelligensia, felt that nomination of Mr. Willkie was imperative — Mr. Walter Lippmann earnestly intoned for him, Miss Dorotry Thompson almost shrieked for him. They felt that the state of the world constituted a crisis, and that Mr. Willkie was needed to meet it. After inspiration from such sources, there was perhaps some formal promotion by business interests. There were tens of thousands of telegrams. But the Willkie movement was genuinely spontaneous.

Pushing Suspected

The excited urgency of all this led some delegates and leaders to feel that there was an effort to push them into something they did not fuly understand, before they had time to arrive at judgment about it. Besides, many delegates and leaders felt they were the responsible custodians of the ideal of government by orderly forms, by laws and precedents and institutions.

To this the more intellectual among the Willkie demanders said in effect, "the way for you to preserve the forms of democracy is to nominate this popular man, who also believes in the forms, and will help to preserve them. If you don't nominate Willkie, the whole two-party system may be endangered."

They recommended Mr. Wilkie as one who, because of personality, meets the demand of the people for a popular figure, what used to be called a "man on horseback". But, they added, truthfully, while Mr. Willkie is the "leader" type, he most earnestly believes in constitutional government, and would never use his popularity to reduce its vitality.

Some of the intellectual, and also more excitable, Willkie desirers actually talked as if this convention of an opposition poitical party, held at Philadelphia in June, 1940, were the Verdun, or Gettysburg, of democratic government in America — lost if Willkie lost, won if Willkie won. They cried "Fire" and said Mr. Willkie is the only well-equipped fireman.

For myself, I just don't know. There are doom-ridden forces loose in the world. Also there are correspondingly excited fears. — (Copyright, 1940, New York Tribune, Inc.)

The Bill Must Be Paid

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Every third day you work not for yourself but for the government.

On 100 days of every year your earnings are taken by federal, state or local taxes.

Thirty per cent of your income is not yours but the government's.

But you may say, "I don't pay any income tax." True, your share may not be labeled income tax, but you pay it just the same—through hidden taxes.

Dr. Mabel Newcomer, of Vasser, has made a study of taxes paid by average Americans under the New Deal. She found that a farmer with an income of $500 a year (who, of course, pays no income tax as such) really has a tax burden of $70 a year. His neighbor with a $2,000 income paid $180. Not only are both those figures high, but the lower the income, the higher the relative tax burden. The $500 a year man paid a fourteen percent income tax bill. And the $1,000 wage earner in the average state has a total tax burden of $175, or eighteen percent. Since these studies were made, tax collections have increased more than twenty-five per cent.

And now, due to New Deal squandering and past neglect of national defense, taxes are due for another large increase.

Every citizen contributes to the money the government spends, and eventually, either through higher and higher taxes or through inflation, you and yours will pay every cent of the bill that has been piled up. Don't, for one moment, forget that.

A Job for the Experts

From the Cincinnati Times-Star

The other day Attorney General Jackson warned that volunteer counter-espionage groups in this country should be discouraged. It was a timely warning. Hunting down spies and saboteurs is a job for experts, and the Government has, in the Federal Bureau of Investigation, a expert organization to handle it.

Every American man and woman over the age of 40 can recall examples of serious injustice to loyal Americans of German descent during the last war. We are not at war now, yet the intense popular feeling against Hitler and Mussolini threatens to expose perfectly innocent citizens of German or Italian blood to unjust suspicion. Some cases have been reported already.

This is not to underestimate the dangers of a Fifth Column in the United States. With our huge alien population, our mass of Communists and fellow-travelers, our Nazi and Fascist sympathizers, we must be on guard against sabotage in the vital defense industries. But the job of dealing with a Fifth Column is a job for the government.

It is the duty of every citizen, as Mr. Jackson says, to report any information he may have about the work of spies or saboteurs. But it is not his duty to engage in whispering campaigns or to take the law into his own hands as an individual or a member of a private group. The democratic way to deal with this problem is to co-operate with the F. B. I., which is trained to discriminate between criminals and innocent victims of suspicion. The encouragement of private spying is one of the most despicable things about totalitarian rule.

Praiseworthy Attempt

From the Parkersburg, W. Va., News

The amendments to the Wagner National Labor Relations act, which were recently approved by the House by a two to one vote, represent a praiseworthy attempt to correct a law which has been a constant source of industrial discord.

The amendments provide for the appointment of a new labor board, separate administrative and judicial functions, permit employers to discuss labor problems with employes, require the board to obtain the approval of members of craft unions before forcing their absorption into industrial unions, and make it legal for employers to refuse to bargain with alien labor leaders.

In no way would these amendments deprive labor of any legitimate right or protection which it now has. The cause of honest unionism would not be imperiled to the slightest degree, and the right of collective bargaining would not be weakened. All the amendments would do, is to eliminate certain abuses which have no place in a free country. They would stop the labor board from acting as judge, jury and prosecutor, all in one—and they would deprive czar-like alien agitators of powers which have been employed time and again to foment unnecessary and unjustified industrial strife and violence.

The laboring man himself will gain most, in the long run, from reform of the Wagner act—even as the honest laboring man is the worst sufferer when labor racketeering is permitted to run rampant.

Isle of Man, Now In the News, Has A Unique Record

BY EDWIN C. HILL

The little island which produces tailless cats comes into the news, but not on account of the tailless cats. The British government is sending all German and Austrian women to the Isle of Man in the Irish Sea. It has other distinctions. It is probably the only solvent country in Europe—for it is a country, in the sense that it maintains many of the ancient rights it enjoyed when it was a principality of the Stanley family, whose chief is the Earl of Derby.

Edwin C. Hill

It has no crime and its last murderer was strung up eighty-five years ago. It is a "possession of England" with a resident lieutenant governor, who, however, lays only a light sceptre on the stiff-necked islanders. They have their only little flag—a triune boot, with the three legs kicking, traditionally at England, Scotland and Ireland.

Goes Traditional Way

In the Middle Ages, it was ruled first by a Welsh and then by a Scandinavian dynasty. It goes its traditional way peacefully because it has no trouble producing a surplus of everything needed. Here is the "autarchy" which the big nations out beyond the Irish sea dream about, but cannot achieve—like Horace, they would turn to their Cabine farm, but cannot. But the Manxmen can and do—no debt, no crime.

Even their tailless cats are paced to the tempo of their neat little controlled economy. When there are too many of them and prices are threatened, they breed less—and more when scarcity looms. Budgeting cats is serious business there, for these strange creatures that prowled the wind-swept island before the Manxmen themselves bring fancy prices in the world markets.

Caine Is Remembered

When we think of the Isle of Man we think of the famous novelist, Hall Caine, who lived there, who did much of his best work there, including "The Manxmen". Readers with a bit of gray around the ears will remember long sessions in the attic with "The Deemster," or "The Manxman". Hall Caine, earned more money than any other novelist in the world. When H. G. Wells was earning $100,000 a year, the Manxman was earning $500,000. He earned vastly more than Barrie or Arnold Bennett or Somerset Maugham, and his estate, after shrinkage in the depression, and other large gifts to philanthropies and relatives before his death, was more than $2,500,000.

From Cottage to Castle

He was a blacksmith's son, reared by foster parents in a little crofter's cottage on the Isle of Man. He finished his days in the great Greeba castle, on Peel Mountain, overlooking the island. Virtually self educated, he went to England in the hope of becoming an architect, but was unsuccessful and was a writer of trade journals before he won his spurs as a novelist.

He was supposed to know the Bible better than any other living man. Certainly, his work is imbued with the stately dignity and the austere simplicity of the Scriptures. He is the greater exemplar of the excellence of the St. James text as a model for the writing man. Year by year the sales of his books increased. They were translated into virtually every modern language. He lived simply, deeply and sensatively, grounded in the life and traditions of the island.

The People Speak and a Real Leader Is Named

IN the midst of a great national crisis accentuated by colossal and costly blunders, the American people have given voice to their wishes, their clarion call has been heeded and a way has been provided toward national rehabilitation and economic sanity in the nomination at Philadelphia by the Republicans of Wendell L. Willkie, of Indiana, as a candidate for president of the United States.

When Representative Charles A. Halleck, of Willkie's home state, placed him in nomination he declared that "he can win in November. He has licked Franklin Roosevelt once; he can lick him again."

Willkie can and Willkie will, but not just because he has "licked Franklin Roosevelt once." It is because he is rarely possessed of the ability and the stamina to execute the tremendous task the people realize must be executed if American ideals, American institutions and the American way of life are to be preserved.

Willkie has been termed the "miracle man." It is an apt designation. To be called to a mighty service so spontaneously and with such unmistakable popular unanimity and widespread confidence is really a phenomenal happening. It is really amazing in view of the fact that he did not seek the office, had neither organization nor financial backing and, while naturally eager to respond to a call to service, was wholly indifferent as to personal consequences.

The reason for this great popular demand is clear. The condition of the country is deplorable and needs to be set aright. Willkie has proved himself in the crucible of hard, practical experience to have the moral and mental equipment deemed necessary in a new and hopeful leadership in a time that has been trying the souls of patriotic citizens. He has had the training, the knowledge and the experience of a skilled manager of production on a large scale. He has the ability to rehabilitate the direful economic situation, to restore jobs and to help business.

Also the man has character as well as personality and that is extremely important. He is fair and generous, always willing and anxious to see and examine the other side of a question, and there is no pettiness nor meanness in his make-up. But one quality shines out brightly in this darkened time and that is his absolute fearlessness. He has demonstrated himself to be a man of courage and that is the kind of man this country needs today.

The selection of Willkie is most opportune because it represents an expression of a philosophy of government in which the masses place their hopes and trust. The man typifies in his career and his viewpoint the thing that has made this country great, and that thing is American opportunity created and developed by private enterprise, which, in the last analysis, means freedom and that is the shibboleth of the American way of life and the American way of thinking.

Willkie will assuredly be elected president in November because, in addition to the reasons heretofore set forth, he commands the respect and confidence not only of Republicans but of millions of independent voters who look beyond partisan considerations to the national welfare as guaged by their personal viewpoint. There are upward of five millions of these independent voters—sufficient to swing any national election, and they have done that in the past. There are all indications that these citizens have become distrustful of the New Deal philosophy, its disappointing results and its dangerous tendencies; and they stand ready and willing to follow a competent leader away from them and in the direction of real security and progress. This competent leader they now have.

Some hidebounders have been just a bit skeptical of the nominee's partisan loyalty by reason of the fact that he was once a Democrat. That, however, should serve only to emphasize, on the one hand, his breadth of mind and, on the other hand, to strengthen faith, as it has on his part, in the soundness and enduring qualities of the political fundamentals of the Republican party.

Wendell Willkie represents the ardent hopes, desires and aspirations of an undoubtedly large segement of a perplexed, disturbed and disappointed people. He must be elected in November. He will be.

Other Changes Should Be Made in Washington

IT is popularly supposed that two of the most capable men in the United States, Messrs Stettinius and Knudsen, have been given power to accomplish the two great tasks of national defense: First, to obtain materials; and second, to turn these materials into defense equipment.

The people believe that not a moment is to be lost in preparing to defend the United States against a terrible power which, after conquering Europe, may attack this hemisphere. But the public is not fully informed that an important cog in the machinery of preparation is Madam Perkins, who holds authority to regulate for certain purposes all corporations holding contracts with the government.

The public is not told that an important cog in the machine is Harry Hopkins, who holds other large powers over business concerns, although he is not a business man but a politician.

Congress is providing a billion dollar tax for national defense; but it is not providing against the creation of commissions, boards, authorities and agencies piled on top of those already existing, and constituting what Franklin D. Roosevelt himself describes as "a chaos of establishments."

When hurried and perplexed, which he is most of the time, Mr. Roosevelt creates another board or commission to "co-ordinate" the chaotic mass of confusion known as the New Deal.

The people are told that new taxes will pay for new defense costs; they are not told that the new billion-dollar tax will fall short of paying the annual interest on the Roosevelt debt. As matters stand, the annual deficit will continue to be not less than $3,000,000,000.

Whatever happens abroad, there can be no assurance of efficient preparation for national defense until a capable administration is installed at Washington.

Our Hope Now Rests With the Engineers

FOR BETTER OR FOR WORSE, for a while or for generations to come, this is to be an engineer's world. The new order that has come up in Europe is one of doers, against which the sayers and the older politicians and the masters of money as such do not prevail. They must be doers, too.

And so must those who reside in the Western Hemisphere, to meet whatever threat the change implies, or to compete with it in the new post-war world.

Among those to whom this nation will look will be such boys as the thousands competing in the National Model Airplane meet now being held in Chicago. Started six years ago in Detroit, these meets have grown yearly and have created great enthusiasm among boys whose imagination has been aroused by flying.

These and others like them will be the boys who presently will become designers of American aircraft, not for war particularly or primarily, but for the services of peaceful transport in which aviation has become a great and indispensable factor. They have the qualities of energy, resource and mechanical intelligence on which there will be a high premium in the years just ahead.

Scientific advancement marching in hand with democratic youth on the Western Hemisphere today offers the only hope for civilization.

Kaarl Ulmanis, recent president of Latvia, had a steady job as milkman at Lincoln, Nebraska, some years ago—before he returned home to become a statesman—and now, chances are he wishes he had it back.

It is gathered from reports from Hollywood that it would be more entertaining to see a picture (one picture) of John Barrymore being himself while engaged in making a picture than to see the picture he makes.

Stalin is a copycat in a way and in another way he's not. In taking over Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia he didn't say a word about protecting them. He called it "mutual assistance."

The Browser's Findings

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The extraordinary Mr. Upton Sinclair has never been one of the Browser's favorite authors. Perhaps because Sinclair has always been a man with a mission, with a moral purpose in whatever he writes, and has never taken any pains to conceal his preaching tendencies. Some readers like that sort of thing. The Browser, frankly, does not.

Marshall Maslin

The same tendency exists in Sinclair's new novel "World's End" (Viking), but the subject of the story is so powerful that the Browser condescends to forgive the author for both that messianic quality in his writing and for the touch of naivete that is always present in Upton Sinclair.

But the quality of "World's End" is so high that the Browser feels somewhat ashamed of carping criticism. . . Sinclair has painted a tremendous panorama of the years between 1913 and 1919 in Europe and America. His chief character is an extraordinary boy, only thirteen when the book opens, who lives with his mother in France but has friends in Germany and England and a father who is the active sales agent for the family's munition works in America.

The father is an intelligent businessman who sees the world with brutal clarity; the mother is a lovely, loyal, thoroughly feminine person; the boy is a decent European of fine intelligence. And the book is an exhaustive and exciting picture of Europe at war—of its etiquette, its morals, its business, its politics and its decadence.

Businessmen, radicals, diplomats, artists, noblemen, financiers, dilettantes troop across its vast stage. "Bill" Bullitt, Lincoln Steffens, Zaharoff and many other living persons appear in the novel, and it comes to a grand climax with its description of the terrific struggle that took place during the so-called peace negotiations of 1919. . . Today's tragedy is implicit in the remark of a French general who announced in a private salon: "This treaty is turning loose a wounded tiger on the world. He will crawl into a hole and nurse his wounds, and come out hungrier and fiercer than ever."

A delightfully refreshing book is George B. Gilbert's story of "Forty Years a Country Preacher" (Harpers). Pastor Gilbert lives in Connecticut where all this century he has been preaching, marrying, burying, baptizing, cutting hair, chopping wood and even acting as a clearing house for market prices to the farmers of his district.

A gentle, troubled book is "The Long Watch over England" (Holt) by Eugene and Arline Lohrke, who have been living in England for some years on a farm in Sussex. They love the English people but they wrote their book in profound fear that the "bureaucratic incapacity" of England would prove a fatal weakness in time of peril. Events of the past year seem to justify their Cassandra prophecies and nobody will regret it more than the Lohrkes.

The Modern Age's Kauffmann Youth Novel Award of $1,000 scheduled for presentation this month has been postponed to February, 1941—because the jury wants more manuscripts from more writers.

Agnes Newton Keith's "Land below the Wind" is still one of the top non-fiction sellers in the country. (Want to know something? The Browser was never able to finish it).

The English novelist, Phyllis Bottome, has gone home to England, war or no war.

This is the fiftieth anniversary year of Henryk Sienkiewicz' great novel "With Fire and Sword." . . James Norman Hall is living in Boston for a few months. His writing partner, Nordhoff, is still in Tahiti. . . Laura Krey who wrote ". . . and Tell of Time", has finished her second novel, "On the Long Tide."

"How Green Was My Valley" has been THE national best seller for three months, has now sold 135,000 copies. . . A book gloomily prophetic of England's future, it is possible. . . And that's enough from Marsh Maslin,

GOP Convention An Orderly Affair, Johnson Reports

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

PHILADELPHIA, June 28 — One clear impression of this convention is that it is clean and orderly — perhaps too orderly. Maybe the absence of bands has something to do with this, but there appears to be less enthusiasm than is usual in national conventions.

Hugh Johnson

I don't know much about convention backroom methods, but there is less apparent evidence of them than in any convention I have attended. I saw some of the inside baseball that saved the nomination for Mr Roosevelt in Chicago in 1932. That was partly done through remote control from San Simeon Ranch in California over long distance by Mr. Hearst. Nothing whatever of that kind goes on here.

Fair Chairman

I think this convention takes its even temper and high tone from Joe Martin, its chairman. Unlike most chairmen, that I have seen, he is not using his office to favor anybody and there is so much confidence in his fairness that there is an almost complete absence of soreheads and sullen resentment that sometimes create party wounds that are slow to heal.

Except for some dirty pool played in Mr. Willkie's direction by attempted anonymous smear campaigns and the jealousy of life-long professionals over the astonishing success of this amateur, the party promises to walk out of here in reasonable harmony no matter who is named

In Deadly Earnest

It is an unbiased convention — even in the state delegations. The shadows across the world are reaching here. Most of the delegates feel their responsibility and are in deadly earnest. They at least seem to be doing their thinking for themselves.

The platform was a typical old-time political job — sloppy and two-faced and, in most clauses, indefinite enough to mean anything and hence to let any selected candidate write his own platform by interpretation. The course ahead of us is too cloudy to chart. Any president of the United States for the next four years is pretty likely to have to operate on a weekly or even daily basis.

More Important

That means to most delegates that the selection of a man is more important than the selection of words and phrases. This fact is largely responsible for the unexpected popularity of Wendell Willkie. In every quality except old time political slickness and in every performance except his lack of an old time political floor team, Mr. Willkie stands head and shoulders above his rivals. It is so hard to argue intelligently to the contrary that if Mr. Willkie had the kind of organization that either Senator Taft or Tom Dewey has, it seems certain that he would be nominated on the second ballot, which is being conducted as this piece is written.

As it is for the moment, it is still anybody's race among the three leaders. Most of the old time political observers of the press, who are wholly impartial, seem to see straws blowing in the direction of Senator Taft.

Congratulations In Order

I am not enough of an expert on conventions to question this and I am too strong for Mr. Willkie to trust my own judgment on such a guess. It may probably be decided before this column is printed. Whether he wins or loses, both Mr. Willkie and the American people can congratulate themselves on his splendid showing. It proves that, in this dangerous world, democratic processes are working even more freely than they do in calmer times. His perfomance stands as a shining example of frankness, courage and ability. He suddenly becomes a foremost national figure whose voice will be influential on any national question. If some one else is nominated and does not win, a good many Willkie enthusiasts will feel that the Republican party has missed the bus—maybe the last bus. — Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

WHAT'S THE HURRY?

Voice of the People Routs Politicians At GOP Convention, Sullivan Reports

MARK SULLIVAN

PHILADELPHIA, June 28 — As this is written, the balloting is beginning. Before that, the situation took a definite form. It has permanent importance and it lends itself to analysis, partial at least.

Mark Sullivan

The situation became a feud between the delegates and the gallery crowd — the gallery for Mr. Willkie, the delegates not. Some are translating this into "the people for Willkie, the politicians not." But that does not follow.

To begin: the speech putting Mr. Willkie in nomination was truculent. Made by Congressman Halleck of Indiana, it had an air of saying to the delegates, "you better nominate Willkie, or else— — —"

That the delegates did not like. From them came derisive shouts. Then a Willkie speaker implied that the Willkie movement had had little or no campaign funds, some delegates boo-ed. So that the delegates may be said to have started the row. Quickly the crowd in the galleries began to demonstrate for Mr. Willkie. For an hour or so, it was a case of galleries for Willkie, the delegates sullenly resistant.

Strange Procedure

This was strange, for most of those in the galleries had got their seats from delegates or other politicians. Each delegate had been given a quota of gallery seats, and also each alternate and members of the Republican National Committee. In short, fully half the galleries must have been the same sort of persons as the delegates. It was no Louis XIV case of the peope in the galeries, the aristocrats on the floor.

Yet clearly there was, in the galleries, and in Philadelphia, and throughout the country, a " we want Willkie" spirit. This sentiment, observers say, came not only from business and professional men, but from every walk of life..

How did this sentiment arise? It will be important to find out, for these were persons who said that if this Republican convention failed to heed the demand of the people, there will be serious consequences. They said that the people are fed up with politics, politicians, both political parties, and all political symbols and forms, including even Congress. These persons said that failure of a political party to nominate an outsider, a business man, would feed a mood of the people which is tired of the forms of democratic government.

Genuinely Spontaneous

This Wilkie movement could only reach the people by the usual channels. Some of those channels were, for deeply patriotic reasons, strong for Mr. Wilkie. Magazines, deeply impressed by Mr. Willkie's personality and ability, had given much space to him. Newspapers and newspaper chains had endorsed him. Two well-known columnists, spokesmen of the intelligensia, felt that nomination of Mr. Willkie was imperative — Mr. Walter Lippmann earnestly intoned for him, Miss Dorotry Thompson almost shrieked for him. They felt that the state of the world constituted a crisis, and that Mr. Willkie was needed to meet it. After inspiration from such sources, there was perhaps some formal promotion by business interests. There were tens of thousands of telegrams. But the Willkie movement was genuinely spontaneous.

Pushing Suspected

The excited urgency of all this led some delegates and leaders to feel that there was an effort to push them into something they did not fuly understand, before they had time to arrive at judgment about it. Besides, many delegates and leaders felt they were the responsible custodians of the ideal of government by orderly forms, by laws and precedents and institutions.

To this the more intellectual among the Willkie demanders said in effect, "the way for you to preserve the forms of democracy is to nominate this popular man, who also believes in the forms, and will help to preserve them. If you don't nominate Willkie, the whole two-party system may be endangered."

They recommended Mr. Wilkie as one who, because of personality, meets the demand of the people for a popular figure, what used to be called a "man on horseback". But, they added, truthfully, while Mr. Willkie is the "leader" type, he most earnestly believes in constitutional government, and would never use his popularity to reduce its vitality.

Some of the intellectual, and also more excitable, Willkie desirers actually talked as if this convention of an opposition poitical party, held at Philadelphia in June, 1940, were the Verdun, or Gettysburg, of democratic government in America — lost if Willkie lost, won if Willkie won. They cried "Fire" and said Mr. Willkie is the only well-equipped fireman.

For myself, I just don't know. There are doom-ridden forces loose in the world. Also there are correspondingly excited fears. — (Copyright, 1940, New York Tribune, Inc.)

The Bill Must Be Paid

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Every third day you work not for yourself but for the government.

On 100 days of every year your earnings are taken by federal, state or local taxes.

Thirty per cent of your income is not yours but the government's.

But you may say, "I don't pay any income tax." True, your share may not be labeled income tax, but you pay it just the same—through hidden taxes.

Dr. Mabel Newcomer, of Vasser, has made a study of taxes paid by average Americans under the New Deal. She found that a farmer with an income of $500 a year (who, of course, pays no income tax as such) really has a tax burden of $70 a year. His neighbor with a $2,000 income paid $180. Not only are both those figures high, but the lower the income, the higher the relative tax burden. The $500 a year man paid a fourteen percent income tax bill. And the $1,000 wage earner in the average state has a total tax burden of $175, or eighteen percent. Since these studies were made, tax collections have increased more than twenty-five per cent.

And now, due to New Deal squandering and past neglect of national defense, taxes are due for another large increase.

Every citizen contributes to the money the government spends, and eventually, either through higher and higher taxes or through inflation, you and yours will pay every cent of the bill that has been piled up. Don't, for one moment, forget that.

A Job for the Experts

From the Cincinnati Times-Star

The other day Attorney General Jackson warned that volunteer counter-espionage groups in this country should be discouraged. It was a timely warning. Hunting down spies and saboteurs is a job for experts, and the Government has, in the Federal Bureau of Investigation, a expert organization to handle it.

Every American man and woman over the age of 40 can recall examples of serious injustice to loyal Americans of German descent during the last war. We are not at war now, yet the intense popular feeling against Hitler and Mussolini threatens to expose perfectly innocent citizens of German or Italian blood to unjust suspicion. Some cases have been reported already.

This is not to underestimate the dangers of a Fifth Column in the United States. With our huge alien population, our mass of Communists and fellow-travelers, our Nazi and Fascist sympathizers, we must be on guard against sabotage in the vital defense industries. But the job of dealing with a Fifth Column is a job for the government.

It is the duty of every citizen, as Mr. Jackson says, to report any information he may have about the work of spies or saboteurs. But it is not his duty to engage in whispering campaigns or to take the law into his own hands as an individual or a member of a private group. The democratic way to deal with this problem is to co-operate with the F. B. I., which is trained to discriminate between criminals and innocent victims of suspicion. The encouragement of private spying is one of the most despicable things about totalitarian rule.

Praiseworthy Attempt

From the Parkersburg, W. Va., News

The amendments to the Wagner National Labor Relations act, which were recently approved by the House by a two to one vote, represent a praiseworthy attempt to correct a law which has been a constant source of industrial discord.

The amendments provide for the appointment of a new labor board, separate administrative and judicial functions, permit employers to discuss labor problems with employes, require the board to obtain the approval of members of craft unions before forcing their absorption into industrial unions, and make it legal for employers to refuse to bargain with alien labor leaders.

In no way would these amendments deprive labor of any legitimate right or protection which it now has. The cause of honest unionism would not be imperiled to the slightest degree, and the right of collective bargaining would not be weakened. All the amendments would do, is to eliminate certain abuses which have no place in a free country. They would stop the labor board from acting as judge, jury and prosecutor, all in one—and they would deprive czar-like alien agitators of powers which have been employed time and again to foment unnecessary and unjustified industrial strife and violence.

The laboring man himself will gain most, in the long run, from reform of the Wagner act—even as the honest laboring man is the worst sufferer when labor racketeering is permitted to run rampant.

Isle of Man, Now In the News, Has A Unique Record

Edwin C. Hill

The little island which produces tailless cats comes into the news, but not on account of the tailless cats. The British government is sending all German and Austrian women to the Isle of Man in the Irish Sea. It has other distinctions. It is probably the only solvent country in Europe—for it is a country, in the sense that it maintains many of the ancient rights it enjoyed when it was a principality of the Stanley family, whose chief is the Earl of Derby.

It has no crime and its last murderer was strung up eighty-five years ago. It is a "possession of England" with a resident lieutenant governor, who, however, lays only a light sceptre on the stiff-necked islanders. They have their only little flag—a triune boot, with the three legs kicking, traditionally at England, Scotland and Ireland.

Goes Traditional Way

In the Middle Ages, it was ruled first by a Welsh and then by a Scandinavian dynasty. It goes its traditional way peacefully because it has no trouble producing a surplus of everything needed. Here is the "autarchy" which the big nations out beyond the Irish sea dream about, but cannot achieve—like Horace, they would turn to their Cabine farm, but cannot. But the Manxmen can and do—no debt, no crime.

Even their tailless cats are paced to the tempo of their neat little controlled economy. When there are too many of them and prices are threatened, they breed less—and more when scarcity looms. Budgeting cats is serious business there, for these strange creatures that prowled the wind-swept island before the Manxmen themselves bring fancy prices in the world markets.

Caine Is Remembered

When we think of the Isle of Man we think of the famous novelist, Hall Caine, who lived there, who did much of his best work there, including "The Manxmen". Readers with a bit of gray around the ears will remember long sessions in the attic with "The Deemster," or "The Manxman". Hall Caine, earned more money than any other novelist in the world. When H. G. Wells was earning $100,000 a year, the Manxman was earning $500,000. He earned vastly more than Barrie or Arnold Bennett or Somerset Maugham, and his estate, after shrinkage in the depression, and other large gifts to philanthropies and relatives before his death, was more than $2,500,000.

From Cottage to Castle

He was a blacksmith's son, reared by foster parents in a little crofter's cottage on the Isle of Man. He finished his days in the great Greeba castle, on Peel Mountain, overlooking the island. Virtually self educated, he went to England in the hope of becoming an architect, but was unsuccessful and was a writer of trade journals before he won his spurs as a novelist.

He was supposed to know the Bible better than any other living man. Certainly, his work is imbued with the stately dignity and the austere simplicity of the Scriptures. He is the greater exempler of the excellence of the St. James text as a model for the writing man. Year by year the sales of his books increased. They were translated into virtually every modern language. He lived simply, deeply and sensitively, grounded in the life and traditions of the island.

Used Stub Pencil

More and more he looked like Shakespearre as the years rolled gently on, with his pointed white beard and his high, scholarly forehead. Knighthood came to him in 1918. At his death, this indefatigable worker, schooled in industry in his childhood, left the manuscript of his "Life of Christ" in 3,500,000 words, drawn from years of diligent research.

This man of such prodigious output, who made more money than any other writer, did not dictate and did not use a typewriter—he used a stub pencil, writing on any stray scrap of paper on his knee, never on a desk.—Copyright, 1940, King features Syndicate, Inc.

Tennis Is One of the Safest Sports in U. S.

Game Takes Its Toll in Sprains and Sometimes Broken Bones

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Tennis is one of the least dangerous sports, although I believe, curiously enough, it ranks ahead of skiing in number and seriousness of injuries sustained. I don't understand this about skiing because I have seen about a zillion skiiers take off in the movies and I don't see how skiing can be the safest of all sports but that is what the statisticians say.

Tennis, however, takes its toll in the way of sprains, sometimes broken bones and at least one occupational hazard.

"Tennis Elbow"

The occupational hazard of tennis players is "tennis elbow." Tennis elbow is a pain on the outside of the arm, just above the elbow. A Boston surgeon has described this condition in his own person. Underneath the spot that hurts, you can feel a small outgrowth of bone. The Boston doctor thought that he had chipped this off but the X-ray showed that it was perfectly normal.

The worst thing to do is to try to buck it and go on playing tennis. It is really due to an inflammation of a small bursa underneath one of the muscles in the forearm, which rides over the elbow joint. Sometimes the bursa has to be removed surgically. Heat and rest and strapping with adhesive plaster, and sometimes even putting on a plaster cast, is necessary.

Be Sure It's Sprain

Sprains in playing tennis are common enough. Sprains should not be treated too seriously if they are really sprains. In other words, the first thing to do with a sprain is to be sure that it is a sprain and not a fractured bone. This, of course can be decided by the X-ray, so an X-ray picture is the first treatment of sprain. A sprain is only a torn or stretched ligament.

Tennis had something to do with our modern treatment of sprains because some years ago an English doctor found that his young patients who disobey his orders and went on playing tennis got well of their sprains faster than those who were kept in bed for six weeks. So the general idea now is to rest a sprain for a day or two, strap it firmly with adhesive tape and encourage motion and action.

Questions and Answers

Reader—"Is a device similar to an electric rolling-pin, to roll away fat injurious?"

Answer—It is neither injurious nor helpful. External massage does not reduce fat.

G. M.—"Is a quart of chocolate milk a day harmful? Is the eating of yeast daily of any benefit?"

Answer—A quart of chocolate milk is simply getting so much energy and nutritious food so it is in no way harmful except in the case of overweight. Yeast contains the vitamin B complex which is preventive of various deficiency diseases and neuritis, and it promotes growth and general good health.

L. G. B.—"What is the matter with a baby who has what looks like part of an animal tail, and what can be done for it?"

Answer—The condition is known as a "pilonidal sinus" or "pilonidal cyst." The evolutionist finds evidence from the existence of these little structures to support his theory. They are undoubtedly the remnants of some sort of an animal tail. There are usually only three or four hairs, but these are embedded in a sort of cyst or sac at the base of the spine, the removal of which requires considerable skill. The condition is rare and need not cause any alarm as it gives no trouble unless the cyst becomes infected.

Tennis Is One of the Safest Sports in U. S.

Game Takes Its Toll in Sprains and Sometimes Broken Bones

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Tennis is one of the least dangerous sports, although I believe, curiously enough, it ranks ahead of skiing in number and seriousness of injuries sustained. I don't understand this about skiing because I have seen about a zillion skiiers take off in the movies and I don't see how skiing can be the safest of all sports but that is what the statisticians say.

Tennis, however, takes its toll in the way of sprains, sometimes broken bones and at least one occupational hazard.

"Tennis Elbow"

The occupational hazard of tennis players is "tennis elbow." Tennis elbow is a pain on the outside of the arm, just above the elbow. A Boston surgeon has described this condition in his own person. Underneath the spot that hurts, you can feel a small outgrowth of bone. The Boston doctor thought that he had chipped this off but the X-ray showed that it was perfectly normal.

The worst thing to do is to try to buck it and go on playing tennis. It is really due to an inflammation of a small bursa underneath one of the muscles in the forearm, which rides over the elbow joint. Sometimes the bursa has to be removed surgically. Heat and rest and strapping with adhesive plaster, and sometimes even putting on a plaster cast, is necessary.

Be Sure It's Sprain

Sprains in playing tennis are common enough. Sprains should not be treated too seriously if they are really sprains. In other words, the first thing to do with a sprain is to be sure that it is a sprain and not a fractured bone. This, of course can be decided by the X-ray, so an X-ray picture is the first treatment of sprain. A sprain is only a torn or stretched ligament.

Tennis had something to do with our modern treatment of sprains because some years ago an English doctor found that his young patients who disobey his orders and went on playing tennis got well of their sprains faster than those who were kept in bed for six weeks. So the general idea now is to rest a sprain for a day or two, strap it firmly with adhesive tape and encourage motion and action.

Questions and Answers

Reader—"Is a device similar to an electric rolling-pin, to roll away fat injurious?"

Answer—It is neither injurious nor helpful. External massage does not reduce fat.

G. M.—"Is a quart of chocolate milk a day harmful? Is the eating of yeast daily of any benefit?"

Answer—A quart of chocolate milk is simply getting so much energy and nutritious food so it is in no way harmful except in the case of overweight. Yeast contains the vitamin B complex which is preventive of various deficiency diseases and neuritis, and it promotes growth and general good health.

L. G. B.—"What is the matter with a baby who has what looks like part of an animal tail, and what can be done for it?"

Answer—The condition is known as a "pilonidal sinus" or "pilonidal cyst." The evolutionist finds evidence from the existence of these little structures to support his theory. They are undoubtedly the remnants of some sort of an animal tail. There are usually only three or four hairs, but these are embedded in a sort of cyst or sac at the base of the spine, the removal of which requires considerable skill. The condition is rare and need not cause any alarm as it gives no trouble unless the cyst becomes infected.

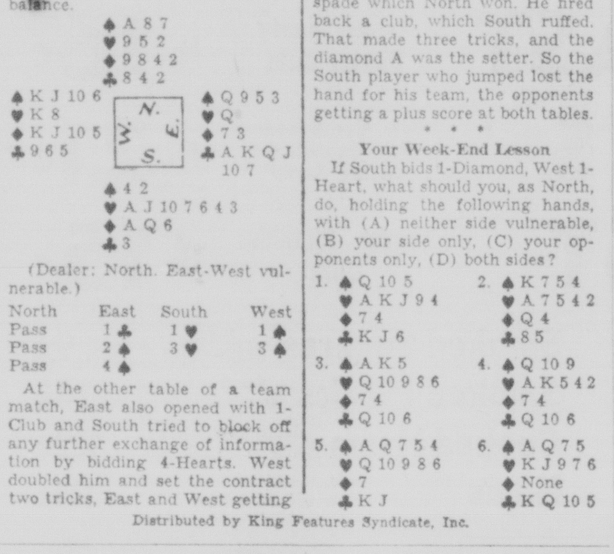
"The Authority on Authorities"

NOT A GOOD PRE-EMPT

MANY OF the best players, who have no prejudice against pre-emptive bids, will not make them if their hands have any defensive value at all. No matter how long their suit, and how weak their side holdings, they will not try a high shutout if their suit is headed by the ace, a card which may be worth a trick against anyone's contract. They have learned that many a time the partner's hand furnishes enough additional strength, so that a single trick of their own is enough to swing the balance.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♣	1 ♥	1 ♠
Pass	2 ♠	3 ♥	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠

At the other table of a team match, East also opened with 1-Club and South tried to block off any further exchange of information by bidding 4-Hearts. West doubled him and set the contract two tricks, East and West getting one trick in clubs, two in diamonds, one in hearts and one in spades. South thought he had won the deal for his side, as he felt sure East and West would play the deal at 4-Spades at the other table.

He was right about the bidding there, but wrong about the play. With the bidding as given above, North could only lead his partner's heart suit. South won with his A and returned his singleton club, in the hope that North had the trump A. He did. The dumy won the club trick, and led a spade which North won. He fired back a club, which South ruffed. That made three tricks, and the diamond A was the setter. So the South player who jumped lost the hand for his team, the opponents getting a plus score at both tables.

Your Week-End Lesson

If South bids 1-Diamond, West 1-Heart, what should you, as North, do, holding the following hands, with (A) neither side vulnerable, (B) your side only, (C) your opponents only, (D) both sides?

1. ♠ Q 10 5 ♥ A K J 9 4 ♦ 7 4 ♣ K J 6
2. ♠ K 7 5 4 ♥ A 7 5 4 2 ♦ Q 4 ♣ 8 5
3. ♠ A K 5 ♥ Q 10 9 8 6 ♦ 7 4 ♣ Q 10 6
4. ♠ Q 10 9 ♥ A K 5 4 2 ♦ 7 4 ♣ Q 10 6
5. ♠ A Q 7 5 4 ♥ Q 10 9 8 6 ♦ 7 ♣ K J
6. ♠ A Q 7 5 ♥ K J 9 7 6 ♦ None ♣ K Q 10 5

Taste Is Beauty Asset No. 1

By HELEN FOLLETT

ONE OF THE greatest, most valuable, of all beauty assets is good taste. Some women seem to have been born with it. Those who haven't it, can "go git it"; all they have to do is to be observing, follow good examples that are to be found for the hunting of them.

The woman with good taste has

an appreciation of beautiful colors, selects those that are flattering, side-steps the dingy tones that the frump invariably picks out. She has an understanding of line, knows exactly where her belt should be placed to make proportions good, does not wear an extremely short skirt if she is over tall or over wide or if she has legs that don't help the beauty picture.

Charm Is Beauty

Good taste directs her toward discreet applications of make up; she prefers to look like a lady instead of a lithograph. It will have an effect upon her behavior. The woman with good taste is never quick of speech or rude. She realizes that beauty without charming manners isn't beauty at all, just a cheap counterfeit.

Of one sartorial crime she is never guilty, that of over-dressing. You won't find her trailing over the golf links in fussy clothes or wearing white gloves to some simple neighborhood affair.

Tiny cracks at the finger ends can be tormentingly painful. They seem to take forever to heal. Every touch of the finger opens the wound.

They come when the hands have been too much in soapy water. Some soaps cause more trouble than others. The best way to get rid of them is to snip away the hardened lifted flesh with the needle point manicure scissors, to apply ointment of zinc oxide at night, covering the open cracks with a small piece of gauze held on with adhesive.

Foolish Prank

If you are spending your vacation at a watering place and go in for bathing and perhaps diving, don't shove people off the diving board for a practical joke. The board may be slippery, and even good swimmers have been injured by being the victims of this sort of trick.

Monogram Hint

It is smart and up-to-date, in monogramming initials on linen for the bride, to use the husband's initial for the large letter, with the bride's first name at the left and her second name at the right of the large letter.

SYNOPSIS

THE CHARACTERS:

LINDA AVERY, receptionist at a New York models' agency, starts to rebuild her romance with

RONALD STAFFORD, her childhood sweetheart, who has "swung his way to fame on a trumpet," but

SARAH MARKLEY, wealthy glamor girl, is trying to capture Ronald for herself.

CHAPTER TWO

WITH THE key half way in the lock of the dark green door that led to her large one-room-and-kitchenette apartment, Linda paused to inspect the young man who had told her to hurry and had asked if she would let him in for a few minutes.

He was tall, taller than Ronald. Even at this moment she wondered if she must go on forever contrasting all men with Ronnie. His hair was rough, dark and slightly unmanageable. His eyes were merry, yet there was a trace of mockery somewhere in them. They were gray eyes, probing, yet far-seeing as though they had looked through distances. His chin was stubborn and his mouth wore a one-sided grin. Now it broadened.

"Will I do?" he asked. "May I come in?"

"Of course." Why she said it so casually Linda did not know. Maybe because she was lonely. Maybe because she would not think of Ronald riding away with a girl with golden hair if somebody talked to her.

A strong, tanned hand took the tumbling key, inserted it and turned it, flung open the door. The man's other hand drew Linda swiftly into the room as he closed the door.

Linda noticed that he stood listening. She heard steps going up the stairs to the third floor and looked questioningly at the tall young man.

He gave a rueful sigh of relief. "I'm safe. But I may have to ask your hospitality until those steps come down and the outer door closes. I won't talk. I'll go out on the balcony if I'm in the way." His voice was teasing, though, and he didn't move toward the balcony.

"You'll be soaked if you step through the window," Linda answered, turning on the lamps which spilled pools of mellow light across the worn but polished floor with its gay rugs, over the crowded bookshelves, the brass and Nailsea glass and copper candlesticks that she had brought from home. "My balcony's nice in summer—you go down three steps from the window ledge and sit among trees, looking into a monastary yard with all the white skyscrapers peering down on you. But please sit down."

He did. He admired some prints on the wall, said that he had seen a certain mountain in the Andes, and told her his name was Robert Barton.

Linda, sitting on a huge hassock, amber curls tumbling around her oval face, repeated it, one ear listening for down-coming steps. She wanted this stranger to go away so she could think about Ronnie. Only—she also wanted him to stay forever so she need never think about the young man who had swung to fame on a trumpet.

"Robert Barton?" she asked. "Sounds like a producer's idea of a movie name."

She remembered later that he winced a little. His voice was brief and casual when he answered, though.

"I've never faced a camera. Electrical engineering's my line. I'm just back from China."

"China?" Linda didn't know that there was wonderment in her dark green eyes.

Linda noticed that he stood listening.

"We were building a bridge, but the war stopped us." For a second his eyes looked through the long windows with their chintz hangings, across the monastary garden, beyond the city to a bridge half done that had wanted to span a river so two mountains could meet. Linda saw the look, caught her breath, because she, too, saw the bridge.

But why had the man come? From whom did he want to hide? What had he done? Where did he live? But she asked none of these questions. Instead, she said:

"I'm Linda Avery. My manners are abominable, but I was wondering if all men must go away some day. Somebody I knew skipped off to London once."

"But we come back," Robert Barton answered quietly. Linda was aware of a rhythm about him, gay and joyful that moved in bright currents. And yet he was worried. He was listening intently for the steps that didn't come.

His face looked young, a little hurt, and remembering her own disappointment, Linda said suddenly: "There's a log in the kitchenette. Let's make a fire."

When they were settled in front of it, Robert Barton smiled in relief. "This is fun. By the way, I live in the apartment on top of you. A sublease from a fraternity brother who is working in the West."

"I know the third-floor apartments. Four rooms, with a river view. And you probably have a man to take care of the place." She wondered what he thought of her deep chairs, second-hand all of them, but covered with gay chintz to match the draperies; what he thought of the silver coffee set on the small walnut table, both relics of a former life in a big white house near a clump of magnolia trees; whether he noticed that she had yellow daffodils in the three pewter bowls and that the andirons by the fireplace were only makeshifts.

But why should she care? She dismissed him because suddenly in the firelight she saw Ronnie's yellow head, his swift smile, his puzzled eyes. He had a new girl. But then he had tried to find her, Linda, and couldn't. Why, she had been silly, foolish!

After while her telephone would ring and he would call. He couldn't make a date in front of Sarah. When Linda looked again at Robert Barton, her eyes were more glowing, her head was higher, her lips smiled naturally.

He studied her face a minute. "Heard a trumpet?" he asked.

For a moment she didn't answer. A trumpet—that was what Ronnie played. And it was always a trumpet or a bugle that called to adventure.

"Echoes of one," she said then.

The man stood up. "See here, I'm upsetting your evening, and it must be safe upstairs by now. If I had a hat and coat along I'd ask you to go out to dinner if you aren't tied up. Being neighbors, we should be acquainted."

"We should, only, if it's safe upstairs by now, why not get a hat?"

He shook his head. "That was an idle remark. I don't think it's safe. The front door hasn't slammed as though the building is about to come down."

"You're afraid?"

"Not afraid, but I hate emotionalism and scenes. If I grab a cab, will you go with me? I can buy a hat on the way."

Should she go? Should she let the telephone ring and ring while Ronald waited? Or should she sit here alone, listening for a call that didn't come, making herself into an umbrella person, waiting behind the door until one man needed shelter from storm?

"I'll go," she said.

Three hours later, when he brought her back, she had a feeling that they had known each other a long time. Probably because he was cut in the mold of all the young men she used to know, she reminded herself. It was odd to think she knew so few now. But then, she had been waiting for Ronnie. Ronnie . . . had he called tonight?

"You rescued me," Robert was saying. "Now tell me what I can do for you."

Linda spoke impulsively. "Go with me to a party tomorrow night. A party at Sarah Markley's."

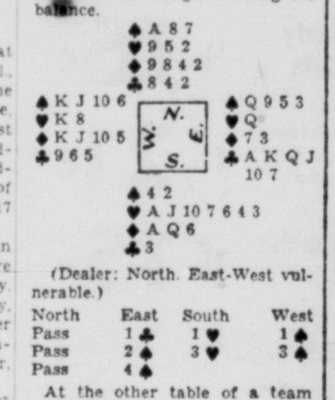
NOT A GOOD PRE-EMPT

MANY OF the best players, who have no prejudice against pre-emptive bids, will not make them if their hands have any defensive value at all. No matter how long their suit, and how weak their side holdings, they will not try a high shutout if their suit is headed by the ace, a card which may be worth a trick against anyone's contract. They have learned that many a time the partner's hand furnishes enough additional strength, so that a single trick of their own is enough to swing the balance.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♣	1 ♥	1 ♠
Pass	2 ♠	3 ♥	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠

At the other table of a team match, East also opened with 1-Club and South tried to block off any further exchange of information by bidding 4-Hearts. West doubled him and set the contract two tricks, East and West getting one trick in clubs, two in diamonds, one in hearts and one in spades. South thought he had won the deal for his side, as he felt sure East and West would play the deal at 4-Spades at the other table.

He was right about the bidding there, but wrong about the play. With the bidding as given above, North could only lead his partner's heart suit. South won with his A and returned his singleton club, in the hope that North had the trump A. He did. The dumy won the club trick, and led a spade which North won. He fired back a club, which South ruffed. That made three tricks, and the diamond A was the setter. So the South player who jumped lost the hand for his team, the opponents getting a plus score at both tables.

Your Week-End Lesson

If South bids 1-Diamond, West 1-Heart, what should you, as North, do, holding the following hands, with (A) neither side vulnerable, (B) your side only, (C) your opponents only, (D) both sides?

Taste Is Beauty Asset No. 1

By HELEN FOLLETT

ONE OF THE greatest, most valuable, of all beauty assets is good taste. Some women seem to have been born with it. Those who haven't it, can "go git it"; all they have to do is to be observing, follow good examples that are to be found for the hunting of them.

The woman with good taste has

an appreciation of beautiful colors, selects those that are flattering, side-steps the dingy tones that the frump invariably picks out. She has an understanding of line, knows exactly where her belt should be placed to make proportions good, does not wear an extremely short skirt if she is over tall or over wide or if she has legs that don't help the beauty picture.

Charm Is Beauty

Good taste directs her toward discreet applications of make up; she prefers to look like a lady instead of a lithograph. It will have an effect upon her behavior. The woman with good taste is never quick of speech or rude. She realizes that beauty without charming manners isn't beauty at all, just a cheap counterfeit.

Of one sartorial crime she is never guilty, that of over-dressing. You won't find her trailing over the golf links in fussy clothes or wearing white gloves to some simple neighborhood affair.

Tiny cracks at the finger ends can be tormentingly painful. They seem to take forever to heal. Every touch of the finger opens the wound.

They come when the hands have been too much in soapy water. Some soaps cause more trouble than others. The best way to get rid of them is to snip away the hardened lifted flesh with the needle point manicure scissors, to apply ointment of zinc oxide at night, covering the open cracks with a small piece of gauze held on with adhesive.

Foolish Prank

If you are spending your vacation at a watering place and go in for bathing and perhaps diving, don't shove people off the diving board for a practical joke. The board may be slippery, and even good swimmers have been injured by being the victims of this sort of trick.

Monogram Hint

It is smart and up-to-date, in monogramming initials on linen for the bride, to use the husband's initial for the large letter, with the bride's first name at the left and her second name at the right of the large letter.

SYNOPSIS

THE CHARACTERS:

LINDA AVERY, receptionist at a New York models' agency, starts to rebuild her romance with

RONALD STAFFORD, her childhood sweetheart, who has "swung his way to fame on a trumpet," but

SARAH MARKLEY, wealthy glamor girl, is trying to capture Ronald for herself.

CHAPTER TWO

WITH THE key half way in the lock of the dark green door that led to her large one-room-and-kitchenette apartment, Linda paused to inspect the young man who had told her to hurry and had asked if she would let him in for a few minutes.

He was tall, taller than Ronald. Even at this moment she wondered if she must go on forever contrasting all men with Ronnie. His hair was rough, dark and slightly unmanageable. His eyes were merry, yet there was a trace of mockery somewhere in them. They were gray eyes, probing, yet far-seeing as though they had looked through distances. His chin was stubborn and his mouth wore a one-sided grin. Now it broadened.

"Will I do?" he asked. "May I come in?"

"Of course." Why she said it so casually Linda did not know. Maybe because she was lonely. Maybe because she would not think of Ronald riding away with a girl with golden hair if somebody talked to her.

A strong, tanned hand took the tumbling key, inserted it and turned it, flung open the door. The man's other hand drew Linda swiftly into the room as he closed the door.

Linda noticed that he stood listening. She heard steps going up the stairs to the third floor and looked questioningly at the tall young man.

He gave a rueful sigh of relief. "I'm safe. But I may have to ask your hospitality until those steps come down and the outer door closes. I won't talk. I'll go out on the balcony if I'm in the way." His voice was teasing, though, and he didn't move toward the balcony.

"You'll be soaked if you step through the window," Linda answered, turning on the lamps which spilled pools of mellow light across the worn but polished floor with its gay rugs, over the crowded bookshelves, the brass and Nailsea glass and copper candlesticks that she had brought from home. "My balcony's nice in summer—you go down three steps from the window ledge and sit among trees, looking into a monastary yard with all the white skyscrapers peering down on you. But please sit down."

He did. He admired some prints on the wall, said that he had seen a certain mountain in the Andes, and told her his name was Robert Barton.

Linda, sitting on a huge hassock, amber curls tumbling around her oval face, repeated it, one ear listening for down-coming steps. She wanted this stranger to go away so she could think about Ronnie. Only—she also wanted him to stay forever so she need never think about the young man who had swung to fame on a trumpet.

"Robert Barton?" she asked. "Sounds like a producer's idea of a movie name."

She remembered later that he winced a little. His voice was brief and casual when he answered, though.

"I've never faced a camera. Electrical engineering's my line. I'm just back from China."

"China?" Linda didn't know that there was wonderment in her dark green eyes.

Linda noticed that he stood listening.

"We were building a bridge, but the war stopped us." For a second his eyes looked through the long windows with their chintz hangings, across the monastary garden, beyond the city to a bridge half done that had wanted to span a river so two mountains could meet. Linda saw the look, caught her breath, because she, too, saw the bridge.

But why had the man come? From whom did he want to hide? What had he done? Where did he live? But she asked none of these questions. Instead, she said:

"I'm Linda Avery. My manners are abominable, but I was wondering if all men must go away some day. Somebody I knew skipped off to London once."

"But we come back," Robert Barton answered quietly. Linda was aware of a rhythm about him, gay and joyful that moved in bright currents. And yet he was worried. He was listening intently for the steps that didn't come.

His face looked young, a little hurt, and remembering her own disappointment, Linda said suddenly: "There's a log in the kitchenette. Let's make a fire."

When they were settled in front of it, Robert Barton smiled in relief. "This is fun. By the way, I live in the apartment on top of you. A sublease from a fraternity brother who is working in the West."

"I know the third-floor apartments. Four rooms, with a river view. And you probably have a man to take care of the place." She wondered what he thought of her deep chairs, second-hand all of them, but covered with gay chintz to match the draperies; what he thought of the silver coffee set on the small walnut table, both relics of a former life in a big white house near a clump of magnolia trees; whether he noticed that she had yellow daffodils in the three pewter bowls and that the andirons by the fireplace were only makeshifts.

But why should she care? She dismissed him because suddenly in the firelight she saw Ronnie's yellow head, his swift smile, his puzzled eyes. He had a new girl. But then he had tried to find her, Linda, and couldn't. Why, she had been silly, foolish!

After while her telephone would ring and he would call. He couldn't make a date in front of Sarah. When Linda looked again at Robert Barton, her eyes were more glowing, her head was higher, her lips smiled naturally.

He studied her face a minute. "Heard a trumpet?" he asked.

For a moment she didn't answer. A trumpet—that was what Ronnie played. And it was always a trumpet or a bugle that called to adventure.

"Echoes of one," she said then.

The man stood up. "See here, I'm upsetting your evening, and it must be safe upstairs by now. If I had a hat and coat along I'd ask you to go out to dinner if you aren't tied up. Being neighbors, we should be acquainted."

"We should, only, if it's safe upstairs by now, why not get a hat?"

He shook his head. "That was an idle remark. I don't think it's safe. The front door hasn't slammed as though the building is about to come down."

"You're afraid?"

"Not afraid, but I hate emotionalism and scenes. If I grab a cab, will you go with me? I can buy a hat on the way."

Should she go? Should she let the telephone ring and ring while Ronald waited? Or should she sit here alone, listening for a call that didn't come, making herself into an umbrella person, waiting behind the door until one man needed shelter from storm?

"I'll go," she said.

Three hours later, when he brought her back, she had a feeling that they had known each other a long time. Probably because he was cut in the mold of all the young men she used to know, she reminded herself. It was odd to think she knew so few now. But then, she had been waiting for Ronnie. Ronnie had he called tonight?

"You rescued me," Robert was saying. "Now tell me what I can do for you."

Linda spoke impulsively. "Go with me to a party tomorrow night. A party at Sarah Markley's."

Desserts Should Be Stepped Up When Summer Cloys the Appetites

Here's a dessert that will refresh hot-weather palates—a combination pie known as "grapricot."

By LOUISE BENNETT WEAVER
AP Feature Service Writer

When the mercury soars, many appetites take nose dives. That puts the warm weather hostess on the spot.

But she can quickly revive luncheon interest among her summer-downed friends by conjuring up something especially alluring for dessert. It may be a frosty tart confection, a tangy fruit roll or some crunchy baked concoction. Just try this idea and watch it work.

CHOCOLATE ALMOND MOLD is such an idea. Make it a day in advance, if you like, to make sure that it will stand up when unmolded. Mix ½ cup granulated sugar, ⅛ cup cocoa, ⅛ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon cinnamon. Add ½ cup milk and cook the mixture until it thickens a very little. Then stir in in 1½ tablespoons of granulated gelatin, soak 5 minutes in ⅛ cup cold water. Stir until the gelatin dissolves and add 3 egg yolks. Beat thoroughly and after 5 minutes, lightly fold in 3 beaten egg whites and 1½ teaspoons vanilla. Pour into a mold (ring preferred) which has been buttered and sprinkled with toasted shredded almonds. Chill, unmold onto a platter and fill the center with whipped cream, slightly sweetened and vanilla flavored. This serves 8.

A welcome thought for a torrid day is frosted Melon compote. Serve it almost frozen and see how quickly the temperature drops around the luncheon table. Chill together 1 cup each of cantaloupe, honeydew and watermelon balls, and ¼ cup fresh mint leaves. Half an hour before serving time, drain the balls and discard the mint, mix in ¼ cup strained honey and ¼ teaspoon powdered cloves. Pour into the tray of a mechanical refrigerator or into an ice cream freezer, well iced. When the balls are almost frozen, remove and sprinkle them with lemon juice. Serve in glass cups or orange cases and tuck fresh mint leaves in for extra coolness. This same idea is excellent for the appetizer at dinner.

BERRY FRUIT ROLL with its gay, sweet topper, will go places. Pat rich biscuit dough about ¼ inch thick. (Use a recipe taking 2 cups of flour.) Quickly spread with 3 tablespoons soft butter, 1 cup washed, drained blueberries, ½ cup cubed pineapple, ½ cup dark brown sugar and ¼ teaspoon grated lemon rind. Roll and fit into a well greased loaf, oval or square glass baking dish. Bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven, pull the dish to the door of the oven and lightly sprinkle the top of the roll with ⅓ cup shredded or broken nuts, 2 tablespoons grated orange rind and ¼ cup red cherries. Continue baking the roll for 15 minutes and serve it warm, spread with blueberry sauce. (Put ½ cup berries in your regular pudding sauce.)

Frozen tarts, paterned after ice cream pie will delight your guests. They are a little on the heavy side so you'd better go lighter on the first part of the menu. Fit rich pie crust into deep muffin pans, sprinkle lightly with granulated sugar and bake as usual. At serving time, fill the tarts with berry ice cream, top them with cubed marshmallows mixed into unflavored and unsweetened whipped cream and sliced fresh peaches.

GRAPRICOT PIE

1 pkg. lemon gelatin
1½ c. grape juice
¼ tsp. salt
¼ c. sugar
1½ c. stewed apricots
1 c. banana (sliced and pressed down in cup)
1 baked pastry shell (9 inch)
Whipped cream

Bring grape juice to a boil; add gelatin, sugar, and salt. Rub bananas and apricots through a sieve and add to gelatin mixture. Chill until it begins to thicken; then whip with a rotary egg beater until well blended and light. Pour into baked (and chilled) pastry shell. Chill again until firm. Decorate with whipped cream.

Peanut Butter Drop Cookies Are Good

These delicious drop cookies can be made in a jiffy. Assemble one-half cup peanut butter, one cup corn flakes, one cup condensed milk and one-half teaspoon salt.

Put the peanut butter and salt in a bowl, then add the milk a little at a time and mix until well blended. Then add the corn flakes and mix thoroughly. Drop batter by teaspoonfuls on buttered cookie sheets (above ingredients will make twenty-four cookies). Finally, bake fifteen minutes in moderate oven.

Prune and Apple Betty Is Good

Occasionally, such an old-fashioned and economical dessert as this will bring speedy orders for second helpings, especially from the children of the family. The ingredients: one cup cooked prunes, four or five cooking apples, two cups bread crumbs, one-half cup liquid in which the prunes were cooked, one-fourth cup sugar, some frying fat and salt to season.

Pit the prunes and cut them into large pieces. Next pare the apples and slice them thin. After the fat is heated in the frying pan, add the apples and bread crumbs and fry. Stir until the apple slices are slightly tender, then add the other ingredients, salt to taste and continue cooking until apples are very tender. Serve hot or cold, plain or with milk or cream.

Parsnip Cakes Make A Tasty Dish

For this tasty dish, assemble twelve medium sized young parsnips, one egg, one-fourth cup flour, two tablespoons melted butter and one-and-a-half teaspoons salt. Wash and scrape the parsnips, then boil them for thirty minutes in lightly salted water. When the parsnips are tender, force them through the food ricer. Next add the well-beaten egg and beat thoroughly. Add the other ingredients, mix well, and drop by spoonfuls on greased hot griddle. Brown on both sides and serve hot.

Crepes Suzette Are High-Toned Pancakes

In order to have pancakes high-toned enough to be called crepes suzette, you have to make them this way: Mix together one-half pound flour, two ounces sugar and four eggs. Then stir in one pint of milk and one-half pint of cream to make the batter thin. Bake the cakes very thin. Instead of the customary butter and sirup, however, cover them with butter, grated orange and lemon rinds, chopped nuts and a sprinkling of orange and lemon juice.

Potato Substitute

Let cornmeal mush or hominy slices, browned, replace potatoes with fried chicken and gravy the next time that you serve it. Mold the hominy or mush in a loaf pan rinsed out in cold water. Remove, slice thin and brown well in fat.

WIFE PRESERVERS

For bridal shower place-cards, buy small crepe paper umbrellas, stick handle in center of a marshmallow, and paste slip of paper with name of guest written on it on handle of umbrella.

Sherbet and Berries

Strawberries and mint sherbet—a grand combination, both in colors and flavors. Pile up the sherbet in a large bowl or individual serving dishes and cover with luscious berries, slightly sweetened. Do not mix sugar with berries until almost time to serve to prevent them from becoming "stringy."

New Leftover Trick

Try this on your leftovers: Press hash or any mixed meat combination into buttered baking dishes. Make indentations with a spoon and fill those with creamed, hard-cooked eggs. Sprinkle with grated cheese and minced parsley and bake ten minutes.

Salad Variations

Vary the flavor of French dressing for fruit or vegetable salads by substituting fresh lime and lemon juices for the vinegar in the recipe. To give pep to dressing served with tomato salad, add a tablespoon of horseradish to ½ cup of mayonnaise.

The Indians of Omaha believe that if a man is killed by lightning the soles of his feet must be split or else he will not rest, but wander about until some other person is killed in the same manner and buried beside him.

How To Doctor Baked Beans

You can easily doctor up canned baked beans by adding a little chopped green peppers browned in bacon fat. Open the can add the pepper and cook slowly for five minutes. Pour into a buttered casserole, cover with tomatoes and bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven. This makes a grand picnic dish, too. It can be reheated over the camp fire.

With Cooked Chicken

Minced tongue combines deliciously with cooked diced chicken, diced celery and mayonnaise for sandwich filling. It also makes a tasty stuffing for small, scooped out tomatoes or hard-cooked eggs.

Desserts Should Be Stepped Up When Summer Cloys the Appetites

By LOUISE BENNETT WEAVER
AP Feature Service Writer

When the mercury soars, many appetites take nose dives. That puts the warm weather hostess on the spot.

But she can quickly revive luncheon interest among her summer-downed friends by conjuring up something especially alluring for dessert. It may be a frosty tart confection, a tangy fruit roll or some crunchy baked concoction. Just try this idea and watch it work.

CHOCOLATE ALMOND MOLD is such an idea. Make it a day in advance, if you like, to make sure that it will stand up when unmolded. Mix ½ cup granulated sugar, ⅛ cup cocoa, ⅛ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon cinnamon. Add ½ cup milk and cook the mixture until it thickens a very little. Then stir in in 1½ tablespoons of granulated gelatin, soak 5 minutes in ⅓ cup cold water. Stir until the gelatin dissolves and add 3 egg yolks. Beat thoroughly and after 5 minutes, lightly fold in 3 beaten egg whites and 1½ teaspoons vanilla. Pour into a mold (ring preferred) which has been buttered and sprinkled with toasted shredded almonds. Chill, unmold onto a platter and fill the center with whipped cream, slightly sweetened and vanilla flavored. This serves 8.

A welcome thought for a torrid day is frosted Melon compote. Serve it almost frozen and see how quickly the temperature drops around the luncheon table. Chill together 1 cup each of cantaloupe, honeydew and watermelon balls, and ¼ cup fresh mint leaves. Half an hour before serving time, drain the balls and discard the mint, mix in ¼ cup strained honey and ¼ teaspoon powdered cloves. Pour into the tray of a mechanical refrigerator or into an ice cream freezer, well iced. When the balls are almost frozen, remove and sprinkle them with lemon juice. Serve in glass cups or orange cases and tuck fresh mint leaves in for extra coolness. This same idea is excellent for the appetizer at dinner.

BERRY FRUIT ROLL with its gay, sweet topper, will go places. Pat rich biscuit dough about ¼ inch thick. (Use a recipe taking 2 cups of flour.) Quickly spread with 3 tablespoons soft butter, 1 cup washed, drained blueberries, ½ cup cubed pineapple, ½ cup dark brown sugar and ¼ teaspoon grated lemon rind. Roll and fit into a well greased loaf, oval or square glass baking dish. Bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven, pull the dish to the door of the oven and lightly sprinkle the top of the roll with ⅓ cup shredded or broken nuts, 2 tablespoons grated orange rind and ¾ cup red cherries. Continue baking the roll for 15 minutes and serve it warm, spread with blueberry sauce. (Put ½ cup berries in your regular pudding sauce.)

Frozen tarts, paterned after ice cream pie will delight your guests. They are a little on the heavy side so you'd better go lighter on the first part of the menu. Fit rich pie crust into deep muffin pans, sprinkle lightly with granulated sugar and bake as usual. At serving time, fill the tarts with berry ice cream, top them with cubed marshmallows mixed into unflavored and unsweetened whipped cream and sliced fresh peaches.

GRAPRICOT PIE

1 pkg. lemon gelatin
1½ c. grape juice
¼ tsp. salt
¼ c. sugar
1½ c. stewed apricots
1 c. banana (sliced and pressed down in cup)
1 baked pastry shell (9 inch)
Whipped cream

Bring grape juice to a boil; add gelatin, sugar, and salt. Rub bananas and apricots through a sieve and add to gelatin mixture. Chill until it begins to thicken, then whip with a rotary egg beater until well blended and light. Pour into baked (and chilled) pastry shell. Chill again until firm. Decorate with whipped cream.

Jonah—the Outreach of God's Love

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for June 30 is Jonah 3 and 4, the Golden Text being Jonah 2:9, "Salvation is of Jehovah.")

JONAH IS a man we can well understand today. He was not only a prophet who interpreted the words of Jehovah to the people of that day, but he was an erring soul himself, given to ill temper when what he had prophesied did not come to pass, and in need of God's rebuke.

The part of the story which tells of the first message he received, which told him to proceed to Nineveh and announce the fall of the city because of its wickedness, is not contained in today's lesson. Jonah did not do the Lord's will, as you will remember. Instead he took passage on a boat bound for Tarshish, foolishly thinking he could get away from Jehovah. The boat was tossed violently about by a tempestuous sea, and all the people on board were terribly frightened.

The boat's master, finding Jonah peacefully sleeping through the storm, awakened him and told him of their plight. Jonah confessed his flight from his duty, and the crew of the boat agreed to cast lots and the one designated would be the one considered as the cause of the storm. The lot fell to Jonah, and he therefore told them to throw him overboard. So they did, and prayed that Jehovah would not hold them guilty of innocent blood because they had cast him out.

The Lord had prepared a huge fish, however, and when Jonah went overboard this fish swallowed him and he is said to have remained in the stomach of the fish for three days and three nights, continually praying to the Lord for forgiveness and deliverance.

Thrown on Dry Land

"Then the Lord spake to the fish," the account relates, and it "vomited Jonah out upon dry land." There the word of the Lord came again to Jonah saying: "Arise, go unto Nineveh, that great city, and preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee."

Jonah had learned his lesson, and he forthwith journeyed to the great and wicked city of Nineveh and cried to all the people: "Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown."

The people of Nineveh were terror stricken, believing what Jonah told them. "The king arose from his throne, and he laid his robe from him, and covered him with sackcloth, and sat in ashes."

He also caused it to be proclaimed and published through Nineveh as a decree that neither man nor beast might taste any food or water, and all must dress in sackcloth and "cry mightily unto God." Possibly if the Lord saw that they were sorry for their ill-doing He would repent and not destroy them, the king said. So all the inhabitants of the city did as the king decreed.

"And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; and God repented of the evil, that He had said that He would do unto them; and He did it not."

Now, you would naturally think Jonah would have been glad when he knew the people of the great city would be saved, but such is the perverseness of the human heart that he was annoyed. He had told Nineveh that it would be destroyed in 40 days, and he expected it to be so destroyed. So he sat on the east city wall and waited to see what would happen. He even reproached the Lord because of His mercy, forbearance and kindness to the sinful people.

Cannot you imagine that Jehovah smiled a rather sad but tolerant smile when he saw one of His prophets acting so like a child? Jonah even asked the Lord that he might die—"for it is better for me to die than to live," he said.

"Doest thou well to be angry?" asked Jehovah.

Jonah made a booth for himself and Jehovah made a gourd grow up in an incredibly short time, so that Jonah's head might be shaded from the hot sun. But He also made a worm which destroyed the gourd during the night so that it withered. The sun was so hot next day, and the Lord caused a "vehement" wind to blow on Jonah's head so that he fainted, and wished again to die.

Again the Lord said to him: "Doest thou well to be angry for the gourd?" And Jonah answered "I do well to be angry, even unto death."

The Lord then said: "Thou hast had pity on the gourd, for that which thou hast not labored, neither madest it grow; which came up in a night, and perished in a night.

"And should not I spare Nineveh, that great city, wherein are more than six score thousand persons that cannot discern between their right hand and their left hand; and also much cattle?"

That is the end of the book of Jonah, and whether he took the Lord's lesson to heart and repented of his own hardness and petulance we do not know. We are sure he did.

Jonah lived during the reign of Jeroboam II—790-750 B. C. The lesson teaches us how the love of God reaches out to us, embracing us ever when we turn from our evil and repent.

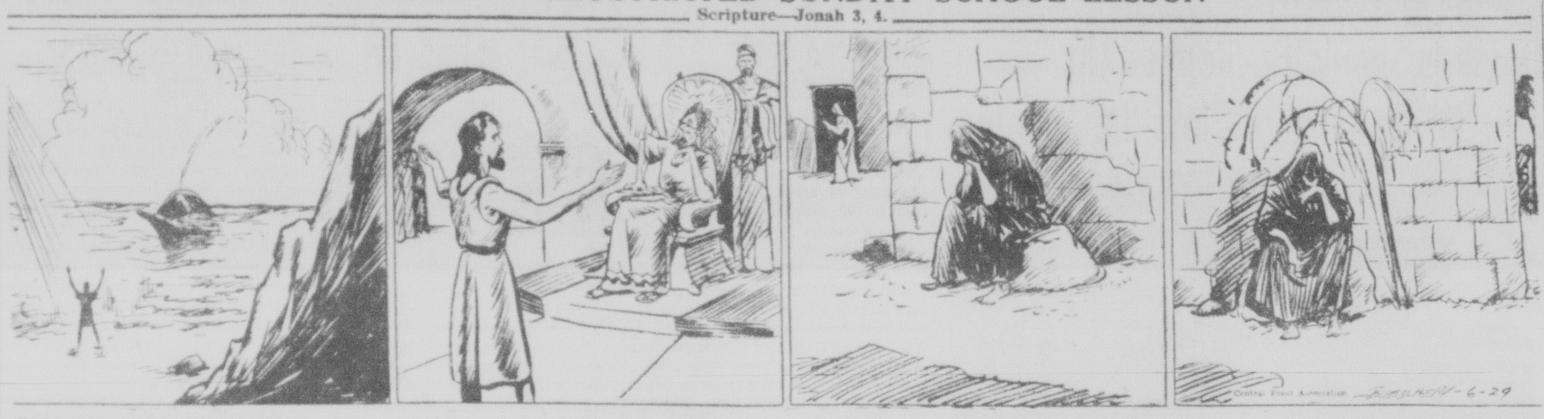
Jonah—Outreach of God's Love — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Jonah 3, 4.



Picking himself up from the beach where the fish had cast Jonah, the word of the Lord came to him, saying, "Go unto Nineveh and preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee."

When Jonah delivered the message of the Lord to Nineveh, its king ordered all his people, and even the beasts, to fast, to put on sackcloth and repent of their

Because of their repentance, the Lord spared the city of Nineveh, but Jonah was displeased because of Jehovah's clemency and went and sulked on the east wall of the city.

God made a gourd grow over Jonah to give him shade, but a worm smote the gourd over night and it wilted, which added to Jonah's grievance.

Jonah—the Outreach of God's Love

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for June 30 is Jonah 3 and 4, the Golden Text being Jonah 2:9, "Salvation is of Jehovah.")

JONAH IS a man we can well understand today. He was not only a prophet who interpreted the words of Jehovah to the people of that day, but he was an erring soul himself, given to ill temper when what he had prophested did not come to pass, and in need of God's rebuke.

The part of the story which tells of the first message he received, which told him to proceed to Nineveh and announce the fall of the city because of its wickedness, is not contained in today's lesson. Jonah did not do the Lord's will, as you will remember. Instead he took passage on a boat bound for Tarshish, foolishly thinking he could get away from Jehovah. The boat was tossed violently about by a tempestuous sea, and all the people on board were terribly frightened.

The boat's master, finding Jonah peacefully sleeping through the storm, awakened him and told him of their plight. Jonah confessed his flight from his duty, and the crew of the boat agreed to cast lots and the one designated would be the one considered as the cause of the storm. The lot fell to Jonah, and he therefore told them to throw him overboard. So they did, and prayed that Jehovah would not hold them guilty of innocent blood because they had cast him out.

The Lord had prepared a huge fish, however, and when Jonah went overboard this fish swallowed him and he is said to have remained in the stomach of the fish for three days and three nights, continually praying to the Lord for forgiveness and deliverance.

Thrown on Dry Land

"Then the Lord spake to the fish," the account relates, and it "vomited Jonah out upon dry land." There the word of the Lord came again to Jonah saying: "Arise, go unto Nineveh, that great city, and preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee."

Jonah had learned his lesson, and he forthwith journeyed to the great and wicked city of Nineveh and cried to all the people: "Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown."

The people of Nineveh were terror stricken, believing what Jonah told them. "The king arose from his throne, and he laid his robe from him, and covered him with sackcloth, and sat in ashes."

He also caused it to be proclaimed and published through Nineveh as a decree that neither man nor beast might taste any food or water, and all must dress in sackcloth and "cry mightily unto God." Possibly if the Lord saw that they were sorry for their ill-doing He would repent and not destroy them, the king said. So all the inhabitants of the city did as the king decreed.

"And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; and God repented of the evil, that He had said that He would do unto them; and He did it not."

Now, you would naturally think Jonah would have been glad when he knew the people of the great city would be saved, but such is the perverseness of the human heart that he was annoyed. He had told Nineveh that it would be destroyed in 40 days, and he expected it to be so destroyed. So he sat on the east city wall and waited to see what would happen. He even reproached the Lord because of His mercy, forbearance and kindness to the sinful people.

Cannot you imagine that Jehovah smiled a rather sad but tolerant smile when he saw one of His prophets acting so like a child? Jonah even asked the Lord that he might die—"for it is better for me to die than to live," he said.

"Doest thou well to be angry?" asked Jehovah.

Jonah made a booth for himself and Jehovah made a gourd grow up in an incredibly short time, so that Jonah's head might be shaded from the hot sun. But He also made a worm which destroyed the gourd during the night so that it withered. The sun was so hot next day, and the Lord caused a "vehement" wind to blow on Jonah's head so that he fainted, and wished again to die.

Again the Lord said to him: "Doest thou well to be angry for the gourd?" And Jonah answered "I do well to be angry, even unto death."

The Lord then said: "Thou hast had pity on the gourd, for that which thou hast not labored, neither madest it grow; which came up in a night, and perished in a night.

"And should not I spare Nineveh, that great city, wherein are more than six score thousand persons that cannot discern between their right hand and their left hand; and also much cattle?"

That is the end of the book of Jonah, and whether he took the Lord's lesson to heart and repented of his own hardness and petulance we do not know. We are sure he did.

Jonah lived during the reign of Jeroboam II—790-750 B. C. The lesson teaches us how the love of God reaches out to us, embracing us ever when we turn from our evil and repent.

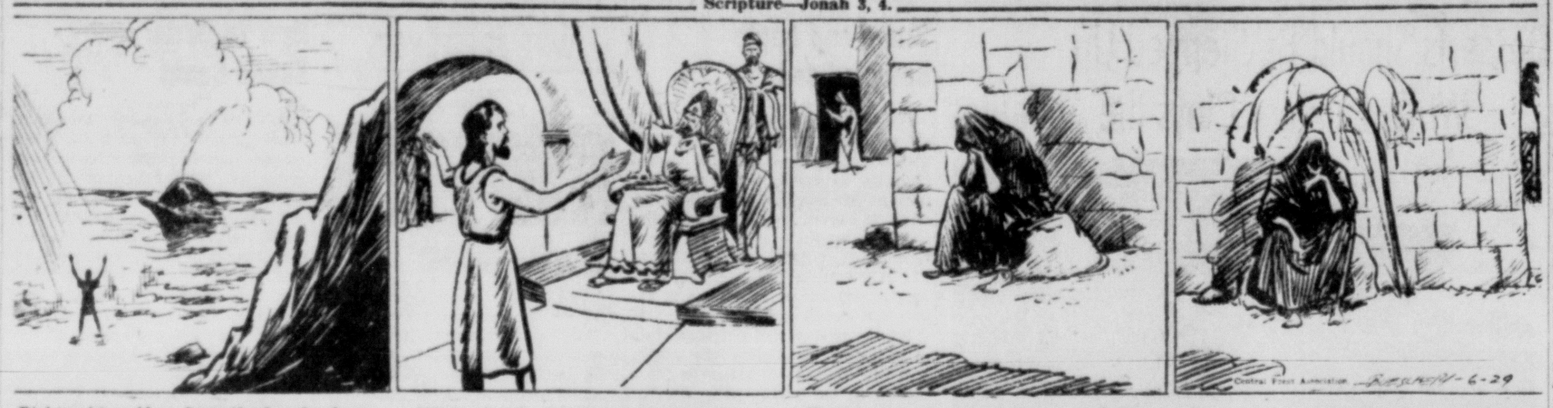
Jonah—Outreach of God's Love — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Jonah 3, 4.



Picking himself up from the beach where the fish had cast Jonah, the word of the Lord came to him, saying, "Go unto Nineveh and preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee."

When Jonah delivered the message of the Lord to Nineveh, its king ordered all his people, and even the beasts, to fast, to put on sackcloth and repent of their sins.

Because of their repentance, the Lord spared the city of Nineveh, but Jonah was displeased because of Jehovah's clemency and went and sulked on the east wall of the city.

God made a gourd grow over Jonah to give him shade, but a worm smote the gourd over night and it wilted, which added to Jonah's grievance.

American Cities Advancing in Prenatal Care

Free Public Clinics and Dispensaries Available in Many States

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

We in America are making progress in the care of expectant mothers. In many communities there are free public clinics and dispensaries which make available to all expectant mothers of these communities the best medical care.

The City of Cleveland, for example, has pioneered in excellent services to expectant mothers. The Child Health Association there, under the able direction of Dr. Richard A. Bolt, in cooperation with the local Medical Association, has for a number of years carried on a program in prenatal care which has become the pattern for many other cities.

This Child Health Association conducts classes in prenatal care for expectant mothers. At the present time, this program, with 118 classes per month, reaches about 5,000 expectant mothers a year, which is about one-third of all mothers confined in Cleveland. Nine lectures per series are given in these classes. Free lesson outlines are distributed to each class member and bound copies are being sold at twenty-five cents the copy. Recently classes for expectant fathers also have been established.

Lower Mortality Rate

Statistics show a decidedly lower mortality not only among the mothers but also among the infants born following this prenatal care. They also show that each added 500 women reached by the instruction program resulted in the saving of at least another life. The Cleveland maternal mortality rate has been reduced from 7.2 per thousand live births in 1931 to 3.1 in 1938, and this reduction has undoubtedly been effected, in a great measure, by the educational program of the Child Health Association.

For the entire nation, the rate for the first half of 1939 is 4 deaths of mothers for every 1000 live babies born, a drop of 23% since 1937. And, whereas, 15 years ago, 74 out of every 1000 babies born alive were doomed to die before a year of age, the rate has fallen to 50. Too bad they have such a warring world to come to!

"The Expectant Parent" is a free government pamphlet to be had by writing to the Children's Bureau, Department of Labor, Washington, D. C. I shall be glad to send any one who will write me at 235 East 45th Street, New York City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it, a list of books and pamphlets for expectant parents.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Do you believe in whipping children over five or six?

A. No, I don't, except in very rare instances.

Q. "I have a baby. Also an invalid mother who expects me to listen to the details of how she is feeling, and between desperation over the baby and a nervousness at trying to listen to her and do up the many jobs, I could often scream, if I'd let myself."

A. Often an invalid mother or father is harder to manage than a child. Principles of good management are similar. Make clear to the mother that after you have done the best you can for her you don't have time to listen to the details of how she feels. Then walk away and go about your business with good conscience.

Q. Would you let children run and romp indoors?

A. No; unless there were a play room for such purpose. Let the child learn very early that games of chase must be played out of doors—for safety and citizenship.

Dusting chickweed patches in the lawn while wet with the morning dew, using arsenate of lead or ammonium sulphate, will kill the leaves and check the growth of the plant sufficiently to permit the surrounding grass to grow in and smother future growth of this weed.

War Puts End To Italian Spaghetti

LOGAN, W. Va., June 28. (AP)—Joe Trepasso, Logan restaurater, is a son of Italy, but no longer can you buy Italian spaghetti at his restaurant.

Benito Mussolini's declaration of war against France and England brought about the change.

You can buy, however, good American "Wood Shoe Spaghetti."

Similarly, Saur Kraut and Wieners has been replaced on Trepasso's menu by "Wieners and Liberty Cabbage," reminding old timers of the days of World War No. 1.

Janitor Retires

WEST LIBERTY, W. Va., June 28. (AP)—Fifty-six years ago, in 1884, Martin (Uncle Mart) Montgomery was graduated from West Liberty State Teachers college.

Recently, at seventy-eight, he retired after serving twenty-one years as janitor and farm manager at the Hilltop school, but he said he expects to "hang around" for a good while yet.

A native of Brooke county, he taught school in rural districts following his graduation, after which he farmed in the West Liberty neighborhood until his appointment to the school post in 1919.

True courage is not the brutal force of vulgar heroes, but the firm resolve of virtue and reason.

American Cities Advancing in Prenatal Care

Free Public Clinics and Dispensaries Available in Many States

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

We in America are making progress in the care of expectant mothers. In many communities there are free public clinics and dispensaries which make available to all expectant mothers of these communities the best medical care.

The City of Cleveland, for example, has pioneered in excellent services to expectant mothers. The Child Health Association there, under the able direction of Dr. Richard A. Bolt, in cooperation with the local Medical Association, has for a number of years carried on a program in prenatal care which has become the pattern for many other cities.

This Child Health Association conducts classes in prenatal care for expectant mothers. At the present time, this program, with 118 classes per month, reaches about 5,000 expectant mothers a year, which is about one-third of all mothers confined in Cleveland. Nine lectures per series are given in these classes. Free lesson outlines are distributed to each class member and bound copies are being sold at twenty-five cents the copy. Recently classes for expectant fathers also have been established.

Lower Mortality Rate

Statistics show a decidedly lower mortality not only among the mothers but also among the infants born following this prenatal care. They also show that each added 500 women reached by the instruction program resulted in the saving of at least another life. The Cleveland maternal mortality rate has been reduced from 7.2 per thousand live births in 1931 to 3.1 in 1938, and this reduction has undoubtedly been effected, in a great measure, by the educational program of the Child Health Association.

For the entire nation, the rate for the first half of 1939 is 4 deaths of mothers for every 1000 live babies born, a drop of 23% since 1937. And, whereas, 15 years ago, 74 out of every 1000 babies born alive were doomed to die before a year of age, the rate has fallen to 50. Too bad they have such a warring world to come to!

"The Expectant Parent" is a free government pamphlet to be had by writing to the Children's Bureau, Department of Labor, Washington, D. C. I shall be glad to send any one who will write me at 235 East 45th Street, New York City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it, a list of books and pamphlets for expectant parents.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Do you believe in whipping children over five or six?

A. No, I don't, except in very rare instances.

Q. "I have a baby. Also an invalid mother who expects me to listen to the details of how she is feeling, and between desperation over the baby and a nervousness at trying to listen to her and do up the many jobs, I could often scream, if I'd let myself."

A. Often an invalid mother or father is harder to manage than a child. Principles of good management are similar. Make clear to the mother that after you have done the best you can for her you don't have time to listen to the details of how she feels. Then walk away and go about your business with good conscience.

Q. Would you let children run and romp indoors?

A. No; unless there were a play room for such purpose. Let the child learn very early that games of chase must be played out of doors—for safety and citizenship.

Duusting chickweed patches in the lawn while wet with the morning dew, using arsenate of lead or ammonium sulphate, will kill the leaves and check the growth of the plant sufficiently to permit the surrounding grass to grow in and smother future growth of this weed.

Dog Is Praised

GAP MILLS, W. VA., June 28. (AP)—Proud householders, seating dinner guests to choice viands of bear meat, praised the hunting proclivities of Bill Porterfield's small feist dog.

A neighbor reported Porterfield's two children were tramping the woods with their dog when they came suddenly upon a black bear.

Bruin took refuge from the fierce yelping in a tree.

While thus held at bay, the children ran home for their father, who returned with a shotgun and disposed of the beast with one well-aimed shot.

This is a good time to sow perennial seeds. They can be sown in an open seed bed if a coldframe is not available.

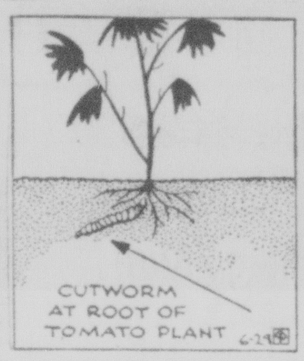
TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY
(Distributed by Central Press Association)



Cutworms do a great deal of damage in both vegetable and flower gardens. They are especially destructive among young plants which have just been set out. Cutworms "dig in" during the day, hiding about one inch beneath the surface of the soil. The gardener, when cultivating the soil will frequently turn up a cutworm. It will be found to be coiled up, something like a smooth, plump caterpillar.

At night the cutworms go into action, gnawing the tender shoots of young plants just at or below the soil level as shown in the Garden-Graph. Some cutworms are called "climbing cutworms" because they climb the stems of plants and feed on the foliage just as caterpillars do.

There are several ways of protecting plants against cutworms. Stiff paper or cardboard collars can be placed around young plants, these collars extending down into the ground to balk the cutworms. Another means of thwarting the cutworms is to place the hollowed out half rinds of grapefruit or oranges near the plants. The cutworms will seek shelter under the rinds, and can then be easily collected early in the morning. The working of wood ashes into the soil around plants is still another method of dealing with cutworms, since the lye in the wood ashes burns and repels the pests. — Distributed by Central Press Association.

Leaf mould is extremely valuable in the handling of certain garden plants. It, together with a peat moss, will do wonders for the rhododendrons as well as for mountain laurel and the andromedas. It is important to keep in mind the fact that plants of this character must have entirely different treatment from the other shrubs.

Parsley may be had for seasoning the year around if it is clipped off and dried when the plants are full grown. After it is perfectly dry, store it in a sealed glass can and it is always ready for seasoning, with the true parsley flavor.

Dog Is Praised

GAP MILLS, W. VA., June 28. (AP)—Proud householders, seating dinner guests to choice viands of bear meat, praised the hunting proclivities of Bill Porterfield's small feist dog.

A neighbor reported Porterfield's two children were tramping the woods with their dog when they came suddenly upon a black bear.

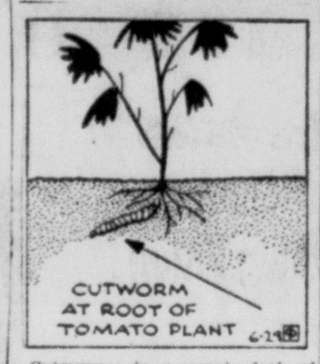
Bruin took refuge from the fierce yelping in a tree.

While thus held at bay, the children ran home for their father, who returned with a shotgun and disposed of the beast with one well-aimed shot.

This is a good time to sow perennial seeds. They can be sown in an open seed bed if a coldframe is not available.

TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY
(Distributed by Central Press Association)



Cutworms do a great deal of damage in both vegetable and flower gardens. They are especially destructive among young plants which have just been set out. Cutworms "dig in" during the day, hiding about one inch beneath the surface of the soil. The gardener, when cultivating the soil ,will frequently turn up a cutworm. It will be found to be coiled up, something like a smooth, plump caterpillar.

At night the cutworms go into action, gnawing the tender shoots of young plants just at or below the soil level as shown in the Garden-Graph. Some cutworms are called "climbing cutworms" because they climb the stems of plants and feed on the foliage just as caterpillars do.

There are several ways of protecting plants against cutworms. Stiff paper or cardboard collars can be placed around young plants, these collars extending down into the ground to balk the cutworms. Another means of thwarting the cutworms is to place the hollowed out half rinds of grapefruit or oranges near the plants. The cutworms will seek shelter under the rinds, and can then be easily collected early in the morning. The working of wood ashes into the soil around plants is still another method of dealing with cutworms, since the lye in the wood ashes burns and repels the pests. — Distributed by Central Press Association.

Leaf mould is extremely valuable in the handling of certain garden plants. It, together with a peat moss, will do wonders for the rhododendrons as well as for mountain laurel and the andromedas. It is important to keep in mind the fact that plants of this character must have entirely different treatment from the other shrubs.

Parsley may be had for seasoning the year around if it is clipped off and dried when the plants are full grown. After it is perfectly dry, store it in a sealed glass can and it is always ready for seasoning, with the true parsley flavor.

South Branch Will Be Best Place Today for Bass Fishing in W.Va.

Conservation Commission Says Streams in That Area in Good Condition

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 28 (AP) — The Conservation Commission, in a tip to the anglers, reported tonight the South Branch watershed will be the best spot for bass fishing when the season opens tomorrow.

Streams in that area are clear and in good condition, the commission reported.

The Southern West Virginia streams, disturbed by recent rains, are high and muddy, the commission added.

The official report showed trout waters high, but milky to clear, providing fair fishing.

The open period on frogs came in ahead of bass. Frog hunting became legal at 6 o'clock tonight.

By agreement with Supervisor Arthur Wood of the Monongahela National Forest, the Williams river, one of the best known West Virginia trout streams, will be thrown open for four days from July 3-7, the commission said. The agreement includes only the river itself and not it's tributaries.

Admittance to the park will be by permit.

The stream has been closed to fishing because of the forest fire hazard.

Conservation Commissioner H. W. Shawhan expects to get some information from bass fishermen which will guide future restocking policies and has placed red mailboxes at the ends of four "test" sections for determination of the fish "crop."

The sections designated, each about four miles long, are on the South Branch, Cacapon, Elk and Greenbrier rivers. All fish taken from the streams within the areas must be reported.

South Branch Will Be Best Place Today for Bass Fishing in W.Va.

Conservation Commission Says Streams in That Area in Good Condition

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 28 (AP) — The Conservation Commission, in a tip to the anglers, reported tonight the South Branch watershed will be the best spot for bass fishing when the season opens tomorrow.

Streams in that area are clear and in good condition, the commission reported.

The Southern West Virginia streams, disturbed by recent rains, are high and muddy, the commission added.

The official report showed trout waters high, but milky to clear, providing fair fishing.

The open period on frogs came in ahead of bass. Frog hunting became legal at 6 o'clock tonight.

By agreement with Supervisor Arthur Wood of the Monongahela National Forest, the Williams river, one of the best known West Virginia trout streams, will be thrown open for four days from July 3-7, the commission said. The agreement includes only the river itself and not it's tributaries.

Admittance to the park will be by permit.

The stream has been closed to fishing because of the forest fire hazard.

Conservation Commissioner H. W. Shawhan expects to get some information from bass fishermen which will guide future restocking policies and has placed red mailboxes at the ends of four "test" sections for determination of the fish "crop."

The sections designated, each about four miles long, are on the South Branch, Cacapon, Elk and Greenbrier rivers. All fish taken from the streams within the areas must be reported.

Petition Is Denied

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 28, (AP), A petition for a temporary injunction to prevent enforcement of a new state law which after Sunday will bar double-decker automobile transports from the highways, was rejected today by Circuit Judge Julian F. Bouchelle.

The case will be carried to the State Supreme Court, attorneys for the West Virginia Automobile Dealers Association and five trucking firms said.

The truckers contended the law, passed by the 1939 legislature, discriminatory and in violation of the Federal Constitution.

However, the West Virginia Railroad Association, opposing the injunction request, claimed the question was decided against the truckers this spring by the U. S. Supreme Court, ruling in a Pennsylvania case.

Utilities Lead Stocks Higher, Willkie's Company Shares Gain

Prices Jump One to Four Points, but Later Drop Slightly

NEW YORK, June 28 (AP)—Stocks, led by utilities, pushed up in today's market as many Wall street traders apparently found speculative inspiration in the selection by the Republicans of Wendell L. Willkie as their candidate for the White House.

Prices jumped 1 to more than 4 points at the start to the best levels of the day. Quotations, however, were unable to withstand profit taking and trends soon began to back away. Closing gains in numerous instances were down 50 per cent from the tops.

Transfers of 1,173,100 shares compared with 441,020 yesterday.

Commonwealth & Southern common, on a 75,000-share trade, was up ⅛ at 1⅝. Willkie is president of this corporation, but announced he would resign Monday.

Prominent on the forward tilt were North American, Consolidated Edison, Public Service of N. J., American Water Works, Columbia Gas, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Great Northern, Westinghouse, Dow Chemical, du Pont, J. C. Penney and Sears Roebuck.

In the Curb Aluminum of America was up 4⅛. Lesser gainers included American Gas, Cities Service, Electric Bond & Share, Jones & Laughlin and Northern States Power "A". Turnover was around 286,000 shares against 93,000 Thursday.

Strong Blackmail Story Boasts Talented Cast

Exposing the methods by which blackmail rings and extortion racketeers prey upon unhappy victims and force them to pay tribute which totals millions of dollars each year, Universal's picture "Framed," is now at the Garden Theatre.

Turning the spotlight upon a vicious and heartless type of criminal which police in every city are trying to stamp out, the picture has fine action scenes combined with a pleasing romantic story.

Frank Albertson portrays a newspaper reporter who has the courage to fight a band of blackmailers who have planted fake evidence implicating him in a murder. With the aid of his city editor, Robert Armstrong, and the girl with whom he is in love, Constance Moore, the reporter finally is able to bring the criminals to justice.

Popular players in the supporting cast include Jerome Cowan, Sidney Blackmer, Judith Allen, Herbert Rawlinson, Jack Arnold, Milburn Stone and Barbara Pepper, who is seen as the "lure" for the extortionists.

The co-feature at the Garden is the Western, "Three Texas Steers," starring John Wayne, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune.

Daughter's Sacrifice Is Theme of Picture

The heroic sacrifice of a daughter who throws away her future and freedom for the sake of her mother's happiness and her father's welfare, is the basis of "A Bill of Divorcement," starting today at the New Liberty Theatre.

Featuring Maureen O'Hara, Adolphe Menjou, Fay Bainter and Herbert Marshall, the story revolves among the tragic figure of a man who returns from obscurity after a long mental illness to find his wife has divorced him and is preparing to marry another man. His grown daughter is a stranger to him and she likewise is planning to marry.

How the pitiful man disrupts the entire household by pleading to remain in his own home, and how the daughter, realizing for the first time that her blood is stained with hereditary mental unsoundness, sacrifices her own love that her mother may have happiness and her father companionship, make for the drama of the plot.

Maureen O'Hara, who appeared opposite of Charles Laughton in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," portrays the distraught young daughter. Menjou is seen as the pathetic father, Miss Bainter as the wife and Herbert Marshall as her determined suitor. Other important parts are interpreted by Dame May Whitty, Patrick Knowles, C. Aubrey Smith and Ernest Cossart.

"Lucky Cisco Kid" Shows at Strand

This Twentieth Century-Fox adventure film presents O. Henry's romantic rogue of the Rio Grande at his fightin'est, and is by far the best picture of the series.

The Cisco Kid's latest adventure is set in an Arizona town which is terrorized by raiders. When he and his pal, Gordito ride into the town, the stage is set for action and there is plenty of it. A killer beats him to the draw and a bandit steals his name, but Cisco lives to laugh at them all. Deeper in danger and luckier in love, Cisco's latest exploits afford thrills and laughs from start to finish.

A fine cast of fetured players is presented in "Lucky Cisco Kid." Mary Beth Hughes heads the list after scoring hits in such pictures as "Free, Blonde and 21" and "Four Sons." Others featured are: Dana Andrews, Evelyn Venable and Chris-Pin Martin.

On the stage is the "Broadway on Parade" company of thirty-five people, featuring six vaudeville acts. In addition there is a very funny cartoon comedy entitled "Polar Bears." Clyde McCoy and his famous band in a spectacular musical revue and the latest Paramount and Fox news flashes.

After the performances today the Strand will close for extensive remodeling, and will reopen around the middle of July with the Twentieth-Century Fox picture "Maryland."

IN MARYLAND BOOKING

Spencer Tracy and Henry Travers in "Edison, the Man," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture opening Wednesday at the Maryland theater for a five day showing.

IN STRAND FILM

Cesar Romero who has the title role as O. Henry's romantic rogue, is at his fightin'est with Dana Andrews (left) over the lovely senorita Mary Beth Hughes in "Lucky Cisco Kid," the Twentieth Century-Fox picture which shows Saturday at the Strand theater. On the stage will be the "Broadway on Parade" company featuring six vaudeville acts.

Griffith Spectacle Will Be at the Embassy

The Embassy theater has scheduled another double feature bill, which will open tomorrow.

One offering will be a return showing of D. W. Griffith's immortal spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," with sound and music.

The second feature will be Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Earl of Chicago," starring Robert Montgomery and Edward Arnold.

"The Three Mesquiteers" is a western drama, "Pioneers of the West," starring Bob Livingston, Raymond Hatton and Duncan Renaldo, and "Music In My Heart," close today at the Embassy.

A chapter of "The Shadow" is also on the bill.

Picture Has New Civil War Angle

For once a new angle is discovered to the Civil war in "The Man from Dakota," which opened at the Maryland theater Thursday without the customary North versus South and family - divided - against - itself theme. Instead, the leading characters are two Yankee prisoners of war who escape the Confederate prison camp at Belle Island, and a Russian girl who joins them as a fugitive after she has killed a Confederate officer who mistreated her. And the result is one of the fastest-moving, most hair-raising melodramas of the past year.

Wallace Beery is the escaped Yankee sergeant who wants only to keep his stomach filled and head West; John Howard is his young and idealistic superior officer bent on regaining the Union lines, and Dolores Del Rio returns to the screen as the Russian girl, Jenny.

In the supporting cast are Donald Meek, Robert Barrat, Addison Richards, Frederick Burton, William Haade and John Wray.

Buy New Planes

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 28. (AP)—Just another straw showing how the wind blows in the airplane industry:

Lieut. Howard G. Mayes, manager of the Huntington-Ironton-Chesapeake Airport and director of air schooling being given forty-five Marshall college students this summer, announced the purchase of five new (Aeronca) training planes.

The purchase is believed to be the largest single plane purchase negotiated in West Virginia to date.

For Smooth Sauce

When adding egg yolks to a hot sauce, do this to prevent curdling: Mix a tablespoon of the hot sauce into the beaten yolk and, when well blended, pour into the rest of the hot sauce.

Apple-Gingerbread

Fresh apple sauce, rather thick and with a little spice in it, makes a delicious filling for freshly baked gingerbread. Make the bread in two layers or split a thick layer.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion Post No. 13 of this City, in conjunction with the Mayor and City Council of Cumberland, believe that at this time, with conditions existing as they are in war-torn Europe, it would add to the interest of the people of this City to hold a joint "Americanism" day celebration at Constitution Park, July 4th, 1940, at 4:00 o'clock P. M. In the interests of this measure, we are sending this invitation to all Clubs and Organizations of the City of Cumberland to participate and make this day a great success.

Music will be furnished by the American Legion Band, the Drum Corps of the Sons of the Legion, the Drum Corps of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Drum Corps of Company G, and we earnestly ask that all citizens respond to this invitation and adjourn for an hour or two at Constitution Park in the natural Amphitheatre and listen to the talks by the prominent speakers who will be announced through the press in due time.

All musical organizations will assemble at the State Armory promptly at 2:30 o'clock P. M., and parade to Constitution Park under the direction of Thomas F. Conlon, Marshal.

Utilities Lead Stocks Higher, Willkie's Company Shares Gain

Prices Jump One to Four Points, but Later Drop Slightly

NEW YORK, June 28 (AP)—Stocks, led by utilities, pushed up in today's market as many Wall street traders apparently found speculative inspiration in the selection by the Republicans of Wendell L. Willkie as their candidate for the White House.

Prices jumped 1 to more than 4 points at the start to the best levels of the day. Quotations, however, were unable to withstand profit taking and trends soon began to back away. Closing gains in numerous instances were down 50 per cent from the tops.

Transfers of 1,173,100 shares compared with 441,020 yesterday.

Commonwealth & Southern common, on a 75,000-share trade, was up ⅛ at 1⅝. Willkie is president of this corporation, but announced he would resign Monday.

Prominent on the forward tilt were North American, Consolidated Edison, Public Service of N. J., American Water Works, Columbia Gas, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Great Northern, Westinghouse, Dow Chemical, du Pont, J. C. Penney and Sears Roebuck.

In the Curb Aluminum of America was up 4⅛. Lesser gainers included American Gas, Cities Service, Electric Bond & Share, Jones & Laughlin and Northern States Power "A". Turnover was around 286,000 shares against 93,000 Thursday.

NEW YORK, June 28 (AP)—Bond prices moved forward today in a limited market which saw some leaders untouched throughout the session.

Only $5,360,500, face value, of bonds changed hands, but that was considerably better than yesterday's $3,248,050.

Strong Blackmail Story Boasts Talented Cast

Exposing the methods by which blackmail rings and extortion racketeers prey upon unhappy victims and force them to pay tribute which totals millions of dollars each year, Universal's picture "Framed," is now at the Garden Theatre.

Turning the spotlight upon a vicious and heartless type of criminal which police in every city are trying to stamp out, the picture has fine action scenes combined with a pleasing romantic story.

Frank Albertson portrays a newspaper reporter who has the courage to fight a band of blackmailers who have planted fake evidence implicating him in a murder. With the aid of his city editor, Robert Armstrong, and the girl with whom he is in love, Constance Moore, the reporter finally is able to bring the criminals to justice.

Popular players in the supporting cast include Jerome Cowan, Sidney Blackmer, Judith Allen, Herbert Rawlinson, Jack Arnold, Milburn Stone and Barbara Pepper, who is seen as the "lure" for the extortionists.

The co-feature at the Garden is the Western, "Three Texas Steers," starring John Wayne, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune.

Daughter's Sacrifice Is Theme of Picture

The heroic sacrifice of a daughter who throws away her future and freedom for the sake of her mother's happiness and her father's welfare, is the basis of "A Bill of Divorcement," starting today at the New Liberty Theatre.

Featuring Maureen O'Hara, Adolphe Menjou, Fay Bainter and Herbert Marshall, the story revolves among the tragic figure of a man who returns from obscurity after a long mental illness to find his wife has divorced him and is preparing to marry another man. His grown daughter is a stranger to him and she likewise is planning to marry.

How the pitiful man disrupts the entire household by pleading to remain in his own home, and how the daughter, realizing for the first time that her blood is stained with hereditary mental unsoundness, sacrifices her own love that her mother may have happiness and her father companionship, make for the drama of the plot.

Maureen O'Hara, who appeared opposite of Charles Laughton in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," portrays the distraught young daughter, Menjou is seen as the pathetic father, Miss Bainter as the wife and Herbert Marshall as her determined suitor. Other important parts are interpreted by Dame May Whitty, Patrick Knowles, C. Aubrey Smith and Ernest Cossart.

"Lucky Cisco Kid" Shows at Strand

This Twentieth Century-Fox adventure film presents O. Henry's romantic rogue of the Rio Grande at his fightin'est, and is by far the best picture of the series.

The Cisco Kid's latest adventure is set in an Arizona town which is terrorized by raiders. When he and his pal, Gordito ride into the town, the stage is set for action and there is plenty of it. A killer beats him to the draw and a bandit steals his name, but Cisco lives to laugh at them all. Deeper in danger and luckier in love, Cisco's latest exploits afford thrills and laughs from start to finish.

A fine cast of fetured players is presented in "Lucky Cisco Kid." Mary Beth Hughes heads the list after scoring hits in such pictures as "Free, Blonde and 21" and "Four Sons." Others featured are: Dana Andrews, Evelyn Venable and Chris-Pin Martin.

On the stage is the "Broadway on Parade" company of thirty-five people, featuring six vaudeville acts. In addition there is a very funny cartoon comedy entitled "Polar Bears." Clyde McCoy and his famous band in a spectacular musical revue and the latest Paramount and Fox news flashes.

After the performances today the Strand will close for extensive remodeling, and will reopen around the middle of July with the Twentieth-Century Fox picture "Maryland."

Spencer Tracy and Henry Travers in "Edison, the Man," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture opening Wednesday at the Maryland theater for a five day showing.

IN STRAND FILM

Cesar Romero who has the title role as O. Henry's romantic rogue, is at his fightin'est with Dana Andrews (left) over the lovely senorita Mary Beth Hughes in "Lucky Cisco Kid," the Twentieth Century-Fox picture which shows Saturday at the Strand theater. On the stage will be the "Broadway on Parade" company featuring six vaudeville acts.

Griffith Spectacle Will Be at the Embassy

The Embassy theater has scheduled another double feature bill, which will open tomorrow.

One offering will be a return showing of D. W. Griffith's immortal spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," with sound and music.

The second feature will be Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Earl of Chicago," starring Robert Montgomery and Edward Arnold.

"The Three Mesquiteers" is a western drama, "Pioneers of the West," starring Bob Livingston, Raymond Hatton and Duncan Renaldo, and "Music In My Heart," close today at the Embassy.

A chapter of "The Shadow" is also on the bill.

Picture Has New Civil War Angle

For once a new angle is discovered to the Civil war in "The Man from Dakota," which opened at the Maryland theater Thursday without the customary North versus South and family - divided - against - itself theme. Instead, the leading characters are two Yankee prisoners of war who escape the Confederate prison camp at Belle Island, and a Russian girl who joins them as a fugitive after she has killed a Confederate officer who mistreated her. And the result is one of the fastest-moving, most hair-raising melodramas of the past year.

Wallace Beery is the escaped Yankee sergeant who wants only to keep his stomach filled and head West; John Howard is his young and idealistic superior officer bent on regaining the Union lines, and Dolores Del Rio returns to the screen as the Russian girl, Jenny.

In the supporting cast are Donald Meek, Robert Barrat, Addison Richards, Frederick Burton, William Haade and John Wray.

Buy New Planes

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 28 (AP)—Just another straw showing how the wind blows in the airplane industry:

Lieut. Howard G. Mayes, manager of the Huntington-Ironton-Chesapeake Airport and director of air schooling being given forty-five Marshall college students this summer, announced the purchase of five new (Aeronca) training planes.

The purchase is believed to be the largest single plane purchase negotiated in West Virginia to date.

For Smooth Sauce

When adding egg yolks to a hot sauce, do this to prevent curdling: Mix a tablespoon of the hot sauce into the beaten yolk and, when well blended, pour into the rest of the hot sauce.

Apple-Gingerbread

Fresh apple sauce, rather thick and with a little spice in it, makes a delicious filling for freshly baked gingerbread. Make the bread in two layers or split a thick layer.

A's Hurler Loses Heartbreaker to Yanks

Teammates Toss Away Bucky Ross' Well Hurled Game

Holds Champions to Six Scattered Hits but Loses 6 to 1

Four Costly Errors by Mackmen Prove His Undoing

NEW YORK, June 28. (AP)—Pitchers have lost heartbreakers before, but the first defeat of the season for Lee (Bucky) Ross of the Philadelphia Athletics today, 4 to 1, to the New York Yankees, was about as painful as any.

Ross held the world champions to six scattered hits, one of them Charley Keller's 13th home run, but he was undermined by four errors and some generally loose play that didn't creep into the records.

Keller's home run came in the first inning and was followed by a double by Joe DiMaggio. Ross didn't give another hit until the sixth and himself batted in the tying run for Philadelphia in the fifth with a single after Sam Chapman had doubled.

But an error beat him in the seventh and two more piled on the woe in the eighth.

Babe Dahlgren singled to start the seventh and was forced by pitcher Marius Russo, who was able to steal second because of a bad throw, and was sacrificed to third by Frank Crosetti. Then Red Rolfe tapped an easy grounder to Dick Siebert at first and instead of being the third out was safe on Siebert's fumble while Russo scored.

With two out in the eighth Bill Dicky beat out a hit to Siebert and scored on a double by Joe Gordon. Al Brancato threw wild to catcher Frank Hayes trying to nail Dickey and Gordon proceeded to third on the play. He scored on a wild pitch and Dahlgren was safe at first on a fumble by Benny McCoy before the inning ended.

Walter Higbe's Nerves Unnerve Philadelphia

By JOHN LARDNER

Released by North American Newspaper Alliance

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—There is considerable agitation in Philadelphia baseball circles about the character and habits of one Walter Kirby Higbe, a young pitcher with splendid equipment who can throw the ball past the hitter high and hard.

The boys are beginning to hint that Higbe does not thrive on adversity—that his pitching gets tangled up in his nervous system. They point with scorn to his last performance, a couple of days ago, when the Pittsburgh Pirates banged the boy all up and down Shibe pasture, where the Phillies of this free city do their stuff when at home.

The Painful Dentist

In the middle stages of the ball game, with Higbe and the Phils trailing 3 to 2, Mr. Beans Reardon, the eminent jurist behind the plate, called a couple of balls on Bill Brubaker which Higbe regarded in the light of two strikes. The young pitcher foamed at the mouth and jumped up and down in high dudgeon, and the Pirates went on from there to clout him for hit after hit.

It was obvious how Doc Prothro, Higbe's manager, felt about this. The doctor was sore. Instead of sparing him further punishment and sending him home for the day, the dentist left him in there to take the bumps. His policy was emphasized when he sent Higbe to bat late in the game in a situation which screamed for a pinch hitter. In brief, the Doc was spanking his young ace.

Certain of Philadelphia's baseball reporters continued to spank the athlete next day in the newspapers, wondering in solemn tones about his intestinal fortitude and citing verse and passage in his brilliant if spotty career.

Of course, Philadelphia is not one of those towns where the baseball writers manage the ball club. You have to go to Cleveland to find a city wherein the growing boy gets to be a big league manager by mastering the typewriter, with special emphasis on the I-key. I do not know how this peculiar culture came to flourish in Cleveland. There may be something in the air conducive to mastering for the condition prevails in several parts of Ohio—Cleveland, with its typewriter managers, and Columbus, with its bloodthirsty downtown quarterbacks, to name a couple.

In Cleveland, Mr. Higbe could learn how to pitch—and also what was wrong with him, with samples—by reading the papers every afternoon. In Philadelphia, they leave these details and the general management of the ball clubs to Doctor Prothro and Cornelius Mack.

The Stuff Was Missing

They do not stop short, however, of suggesting Mr. Higbe's defects—and I mean of character, as well as ability. Kirby is hearing from some of the boys. Maybe it'll help him, maybe not.

I saw the ball game in which this repellent youth played so villainous and dastardly a part. It struck me, peering mildly from a seat near the plate, that Mr. Higbe did not have his stuff that day—not his best stuff. When Kirby's fast ball is really taking off, you know it.

On this occasion, the Pirates were whacking him consistently, even before his nerves were upset by the whimsical rulings of Mr. Beans Reardon. Big Max Butcher, a mere pitcher, hit the ball squarely on the kisser for a hit, and the rest of the Pirates were picking up where Mr. Butcher left off.

When Higbe's temperament exploded, and Pittsburgh got him for six runs in one inning to the disgust of Dr. Prothro and the critics, it may have been entirely the fault of the young man's character, but I think the Pirate hitting had something to do with it, too. Remember, Pittsburgh, for better or worse, is a remarkable run-producing ball club. The Pirates have been getting to all the pitchers in the league—nervous or calm as jellyfish—for these six-run innings. The buy at the plate can wallop the ball, and so can the next guy and the one after him. It is most discouraging to pitchers old and young.

Undoubtedly, Higbe tends to lose control of his stuff when riled. Strange to say, this is characteristic of almost every young pitcher I have ever seen. They don't make Walter Johnsons or Mathewsons to order. Dizzy Dean, in his early days, blew up very frequently when his nerves were twanged. Experience taught Diz to keep cool, and I figure it will teach Higbe also.

He is one of the most valuable properties to wear a Philadelphia uniform in recent years. I hope he doesn't take what he hears too seriously. If he does, he may cease very soon to be valuable to anyone.

Sign New Players

Mt. Savage and Centerville roster changes in the Pen-Mar Baseball League were announced yesterday by Howard Northcraft, secretary of the circuit.

Mt. Savage submitted contracts for John Angellatta, its new manager, Outfielder Walter Hite, Robert Cassidy, Paul Dickel, and James Porter.

Centerville signed Vernon Elliott and V. H. Hite and released Hawse, Willison, Miller and Simons.

Wyatt Outpitches Errickson in 2-1 Dodger Triumph

Boston Bees Bow on One Fatal Let-Up in Fifth Inning

BROOKLYN, June 28 (AP)—Whitlow Wyatt outpitched young Dick Errickson today to bring the Brooklyn Dodgers a 2 to 1 victory over the Boston Bees in an eight-inning game halted by rain.

The Dodgers' star right hander held the Bees to five hits and struck out six in achieving his seventh triumph of the year.

Errickson was just as effective except for a fatal letup in the fifth inning when Brooklyn bagged four of its seven hits and both its runs.

Peewee Reese and Cookie Lavagetto opened with singles and after Dixie Walker lined into a double play, Joe Medwick singled Reese home and Babe Phelps doubled to score Medwick.

The only run Boston tallied against Wyatt developed out of an error in the second inning, when Phil Masi was safe on a high throw by Reese, went to third on a single by Errickson and scored on a forceout by Buddy Hassett.

East and West Side Win Carriers Games

The East Side and West Side teams scored Times-News Carriers Softball League victories Thursday at Community Park, the East Siders tripping North End, 8-2, and the latter team nosing out South End, 13 to 11. The wins were the second straight for each team in the league which got underway this week.

Phil Minke permitted only four hits for East Side in the opening tussle, while his mates gathered nine off the slants of Sangouani. The winners crowded all of their scoring into the first three stanzas. Ronald Armbruster led East Side's attack with two licks in three trips to the plate.

Four pitchers, two for each team, saw action in the high-scoring affair between West Side and South End. Lindsay was the winning hurler, although relieved by J. Bender midway in the game. Welsh started for the losers but was replaced by "Pete" Chamberlain, who was charged with his second loss.

Bender and Knick were the top bombers for the winning team with seven bingles between them. The league schedule will resume next Tuesday morning with East Side playing West Side and North End engaging South End. Yesterday's scores:

NORTH END	000 110 0—2	4 1
EAST SIDE	323 000 x—8	9 2

North End—Sangouani and Konzal. East Side—Minke and Potts.

WEST SIDE	313 030 1—13	17 5
SOUTH END	130 402 1—11	11 3

West Side—Lindsay, J. Bender and Roy. South End—Welsh, Chamberlain and Baker.

East Side Softball League in Full Swing

The only game scheduled for Sunday is Hicks' at the Senator's Monday. Crystal Park will play at Smith's and the Merchants at the Panther's. The scores of the Thursday games were Panthers 10, Smith's 8; Hick's 14, Crystal 3, and Merchants 10, Senators 9.

The Panther-Smith clash was featured by the hitting of Daugerty for the Panthers who had two home runs.

Charlie Gelbert Bats Nats to 4-3 Win over Red Sox

"Dutch" Leonard Victor In Ten Inning Contest

BOSTON, June 28 (AP) — Charlie Gelbert's big bat, combined with seven hit pitching by Emil "Dutch" Leonard, gave the lowly Washington Senators a 4-3 ten-inning victory today over the Boston Red Sox.

Gelbert lashed out two doubles and a single to drive in three Washington runs, his second two-baser sending Cecil Travis home with the winning tally in the tenth after the Senator third baseman had singled and moved to second on Buddy Myer's sacrifice.

Leonard chalked up his ninth victory of the campaign and enabled his team to climb out of the cellar as Philadelphia dropped one to the New York Yankees.

Cronin sent the game into an extra inning with a double in the ninth after Ted Williams had walked and was sent along to third by a Tabor sacrifice and Leonard's wild pitch.

Westernport, June 28—Boals tossers went into a second-place tie with the Wolverines in the Tri-Towns Softball League this week by taking a doubleheader from the cellar-dwelling WPA-Legion team. The Boal outfit annexed the first game by a 6-0 score and captured the nightcap, a postponed affair, by an 8-2 count.

The Mosts advanced a notch in the standing by handing the McIntyre Bakers a 16-3 lacing in the league's other engagement, the victory putting the Most crew in a fifth-place tie with the Eagles and dropping the Big Boys to seventh position.

Tommy Campbell allowed only two hits as he fed the Legionnaires on a goose-egg diet in the first game of the twin bill. Allan Martin and Campbell each secured two bingles for the winners while Frankie Greco got both the losers' safeties. Lambert sparked the Boal victory in the second game with a trio of socks, with Greco again the batting star for the Legion outfit with a triple.

Mosts' win over McIntyre, their fourth in a row, was featured by the airtight flinging of Don Smith who allowed the Bakers only four hits. Mox Griffin carried away hitting honors with three bingles in four trips while Bartlett got two of the losers' four swats. The scores:

Capitalist Says He Was Offered Yankees in Sale

But Ruppert Trustee Says No Such Sale Was Authorized

CINCINNATI, June 28 (AP)—Cecil H. Gamble, Cincinnati capitalist, said late today he had been offered the New York Yankees' baseball club for $6,000,000 but had rejected the proposal.

The offer was made in mid-May, in a telephone conversation from New York, with a man whose name Gamble said he did not recall.

"He apparently spoke with authority," Gamble said.

"I don't know why I was approached, because buying a baseball club is the last thing I would think of."

The offer included the world champions and their farm system, including approximately 290 players.

NEW YORK, June 28 (AP)—George Ruppert, one of the trustees operating the New York Yankees for the estate of the late Col. Jacob Ruppert, said today he knew of no developments toward a sale of the ball club.

Commenting in a report from Cincinnati that the world champions had been offered to Cecil B. Gamble, Ruppert declared he was certain no such offer had been authorized.

Junior Softball Loop Formed Here

Franchises went to the North End Merchant Juniors, Police Boys' Club West Siders, Police Boys' Club South Enders and the LaSalle Jupers.

Two other berths will be kept open until Monday evening at 8:15 when another meeting will be held at Chisholm's home, but if no applications are received at that time the loop race will start Wednesday, July 3, on a four-club basis.

Chisholm was elected president and William Cumiskey secretary-treasurer at last night's session. League rules, adopted at the meeting, set a player limit of 17 and specify that all tossers must be under 18 years of age. No team will be permitted to sign players after the end of the first half race.

The schedule will call for each team to play three games a week. All contests will begin at 4 p .m. A draft of the schedule will be presented, umpires approved and other organization matters considered at Monday's meeting.

GOLF'S HALL OF FAME

The P. G. A., meaning the Professional Golfers' Association, is concluding arrangements to establish golf's Hall of Fame for the United States. We suggested this idea some months back, and now Tom Walsh and Freddie Corcoran are completing a plan to carry the matter through along correct lines.

The plan is to have a small, acting committee composed of those who have written golf for over thirty years and so have most of the background needed for the earlier days of play. But the actual voting will be carried on by a far larger group, representing every section of the country's golfing press.

The plan also will include the names of only four or five stars in the first selection, to be made from the champions who have paraded U. S. fairways in the last forty or more years. After this first selection is named, there will be additions voted upon each year, largely after the manner of baseball's similar hall of lasting luminaries.

THE LONG LIST

The list of our leading stars is both long and brilliant. There will be many arguments after the first few are fixed in their higher places, especially when the yearly additions face the vote.

In this list the electors have the following cast, in partial array, to pick from:

For example, there are only five men who have won both the U. S. and British Opens. They are Walter Hagen, Bobby Jones, Gene Sarazen, Jim Barnes and Tommy Armour.

There are only three players who have won the U. S. and British amateur championships. They are Jess Sweetser, Bobby Jones and Lawson Little.

There are only six players who have won both the U. S. amateur and the U. S. Open—they are Francis Ouimet, Jerry Travers, Chick Evans, Bobby Jones, Johnny Goodman and Lawson Little.

There are only four entries who have won the P. G. A., the British and the U. S. Open. They are Hagen, Sarazen, Armour and Barnes.

Jones is the lone entry who has won the U. S. Open, the British Open, the U. S. Amateur and the British Amateur. He was never eligible for the P. G. A.

Denny Shute has won the P. G. A. and the British Open.

These are among the factors the nationwide voting board must take into consideration.

FOUR DIVISIONS

There are really four divisions or epochs in U. S. golf:

1. The domination of the Scotch and English for so many of the earlier years — Anderson, Smith, Auchterlonie, and others.

2. The advent of John J. McDermott, ex-caddie, who first cracked this monopoly in 1911 and 1912.

3. The Ouimet miracle at Brookline in 1913 that sent the lure of the game spinning to more than a million kids—that took golf from the society to the sporting pages.

4. The arrival of Bobby Jones and his thirteen national titles acquired in just eight years before he stepped aside.

To this you can also add the rare flares of color that Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazen brought to golf—to ex-caddies who have picked up a triple share of gold and glory for well over 20 years.

TWO AMAZING RECORDS

Two of the most amazing records were written for golf history by Bobby Jones and Walter Hagen.

Jones, by running 1-2 in the U. S. Open through a matter of eight out of nine years against brilliant competition.

Hagen, by winning something like 23 consecutive P. G. A. matches, 28 out of 29, in five successive, P. G. A. title tournaments against the pick of professional golf.

To these one might add Lawson Little's feat in winning 31 consecutive battles in the U. S. and British Amateur championships.

To those who know the fickleness of golf, its touch and timing, its bizarre breaks, all the many things that can happen even in one match, these three achievements write their own story of the near-impossible.

WEALTH OF MATERIAL

This brief summary shows the wealth of material now awaiting inspection by the Hall of Fame committee.

In just a few brief discussions here and there we have already found a sharp division of opinion after we get by the first four or five—Jones, Ouimet, Hagen, Sarazen, to suggest the upper bracket.

After these four the flow of oratory became almost turbulent when such names as Travers, McDermott, Evans, Anderson and others were drawing comparisons in the bunkered realm of accomplishment.

Swarthmore Golf Star Has College Crown in Grasp

Harry Haverstick Gains Final Round with Sterling Play

MANCHESTER, Vt., June 28. (AP)—Harry Haverstick of Swarthmore appeared to have the 1940 National Collegiate A. A. golf championship in his grasp today when he gained the final round by playing 31 holes in four under par against two capable opponents.

The Swarthmore senior, who eliminated Stewart (Skippy) Alexander of Duke, 3 and 2, and Bill Cordingley of Harvard, 4 and 3, will engage F. Dixon Brooke of Virginia in tomorrow's North-South 36-hole title match.

Brooke went four over par, going 33 holes with Cary Middlecoff of Mississippi, who bowed out of the quarter-finals, 3 and 2, and Eddie Foy of Holy Cross, his 2 and 1 victim.

Much of Haverstick's success was due to his deadly chipping. He also rapped in hole-winning putts up to 20 feet. The Sparthmore star was down only once during the day, to Allender, but he wiped out a two-hole margin by birdie-ing the ninth and 10th holes.

Brooke was even par for his 16 holes against Middlecoff, who found himself three down at the turn, but the Cavalier's game tapered off a bit during the afternoon. He was forced to trail Foy by a stroke when Foy got a birdie deuce with a five-footer on the 190-yard sixth. Brooke won the seventh and eighth to go one up before Booth rounded the turn with 37's and he also outscored his rival on the 13th.

Foy qualified for the semi-finals by defeating Bill Clark of Dartmouth, 4 and 2, and in the other third-rounder Cordingly outplayed Bill Hall of Iowa State, a semi-finalist at Des Moiner last year for a 2 and 1 victory.

Rockingchair League Argument Adds Fuel To Fire as Cops Lose

The controversy that threatens to rage in the Rockingchair Softball League was fanned to a white heat last evening when the Bluecoats of the Police Department (aided and abetted by city employes of other departments who can bat better than some Bluecoats, even without expert training in pounding a pantoon "saw red" after Jolly Jim Winkinson, cause of contention, throttled the Policeman's last inning rally for the Junior Association of Commerce which won the contest therewith, therefore and thereby, 14-13.

The Police Department Bluecoats could readily have invoked their prerogative of putting the handcuffs on the orators of the Junior Chamber, and vice-versa, for people have been locked up for less disturbance of the peace on the streets.

The Cops and their cohorts were trailing, 13-6, when they took their turn at thumping in the seventh, and they drove Cowherd all over the pasture with seven runs ambling in before Wilkinson was shifted from second base to the slinging box. He gave a double to Davis but Shober went out, pitcher to first, and Davis was docketed at third as Maphis fanned.

The Junior Association collared Chisholm for 11 bingles, including a homer by Hetzel and a triple by White, with four doubles for good measure. The Cops clouted six doubles and two triples, Stitcher and Shober socking the latter in the collection of 20 hits.

Line score:

POLICE	000	132 7—13	20 5
JR. ASSN.	251	014 1—14	11 9

Chisholm and H. Stitcher; Cowherd, Wilkinson and Ley.

Only Mel Ott, Paul and Lloyd Waner and Chuck Klein, among the National league players, have garnered more than 2,000 hits in their careers.

Bill Werber is the champion base stealer in the National league. His yearly average is 20.

A's Hurler Loses Heartbreaker to Yanks

Teammates Toss Away Bucky Ross' Well Hurled Game

Holds Champions to Six Scattered Hits but Loses 6 to 1

Four Costly Errors by Mackmen Prove His Undoing

NEW YORK, June 28. (AP)—Pitchers have lost heartbreakers before, but the first defeat of the season for Lee (Bucky) Ross of the Philadelphia Athletics today, 4 to 1, to the New York Yankees, was about as painful as any.

Ross held the world champions to six scattered hits, one of them Charley Keller's 13th home run, but he was undermined by four errors and some generally loose play that didn't creep into the records.

Keller's home run came in the first inning and was followed by a double by Joe DiMaggio. Ross didn't give another hit until the sixth and himself batted in the tying run for Philadelphia in the fifth with a single after Sam Chapman had doubled.

But an error beat him in the seventh and two more piled on the woe in the eighth.

Babe Dahlgren singled to start the seventh and was forced by pitcher Marius Russo, who was able to steal second because of a bad throw, and was sacrificed to third by Frank Crosetti. Then Red Rolfe tapped an easy grounder to Dick Siebert at first and instead of being the third out was safe on Siebert's fumble while Russo scored.

With two out in the eighth Bill Dicky beat out a hit to Siebert and scored on a double by Joe Gordon. Al Brancato threw wild to catcher Frank Hayes trying to nail Dickey and Gordon proceeded to third on the play. He scored on a wild pitch and Dahlgren was safe at first on a fumble by Benny McCoy before the inning ended.

Walter Higbe's Nerves Unnerve Philadelphia

Released by North American Newspaper Alliance

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—There is considerable agitation in Philadelphia baseball circles about the character and habits of one Walter Kirby Higbe, a young pitcher with splendid equipment who can throw the ball past the hitter high and hard.

The boys are beginning to hint that Higbe does not thrive on adversity—that his pitching gets tangled up in his nervous system. They point with scorn to his last performance, a couple of days ago, when the Pittsburgh Pirates banged the boy all up and down Shibe pasture, where the Phillies of this free city do their stuff when at home.

The Painful Dentist

In the middle stages of the ball game, with Higbe and the Phils trailing 3 to 2, Mr. Beans Reardon, the eminent jurist behind the plate, called a couple of balls on Bill Brubaker which Higbe regarded in the light of two strikes. The young pitcher foamed at the mouth and jumped up and down in high dudgeon, and the Pirates went on from there to clout him for hit after hit.

It was obvious how Doc Prothro, Higbe's manager, felt about this. The doctor was sore. Instead of sparing him further punishment and sending him home for the day, the dentist left him in there to take the bumps. His policy was emphasized when he sent Higbe to bat late in the game in a situation which screamed for a pinch hitter. In brief, the Doc was spanking his young ace.

Certain of Philadelphia's baseball reporters continued to spank the athlete next day in the newspapers, wondering in solemn tones about his intestinal fortitude and citing verse and passage in his brilliant if spotty career.

Of course, Philadelphia is not one of those towns where the baseball writers manage the ball club. You have to go to Cleveland to find a city wherein the growing boy gets to be a big league manager by mastering the typewriter, with special emphasis on the I-key. I do not know how this peculiar culture came to flourish in Cleveland. There may be something in the air conducive to mastering, for the condition prevails in several parts of Ohio—Cleveland, with its typewriter managers, and Columbus, with its bloodthirsty downtown quarterbacks, to name a couple.

In Cleveland, Mr. Higbe could learn how to pitch—and also what was wrong with him, with samples—by reading the papers every afternoon. In Philadelphia, they leave these details and the general management of the ball clubs to Doctor Prothro and Cornelius Mack.

The Stuff Was Missing

They do not stop short, however, of suggesting Mr. Higbe's defects—and I mean of character, as well as ability. Kirby is hearing from some of the boys. Maybe it'll help him, maybe not.

I saw the ball game in which this repellent youth played so villainous and dastardly a part. It struck me, peering mildly from a seat near the plate, that Mr. Higbe did not have his stuff that day—not his best stuff. When Kirby's fast ball is really taking off, you know it.

On this occasion, the Pirates were whacking him consistently, even before his nerves were upset by the whimsical rulings of Mr. Beans Reardon. Big Max Butcher, a mere pitcher, hit the ball squarely on the kisser for a hit, and the rest of the Pirates were picking up where Mr. Butcher left off.

When Higbe's temperament exploded, and Pittsburgh got him for six runs in one inning to the disgust of Dr. Prothro and the critics, it may have been entirely the fault of the young man's character, but I think the Pirate hitting had something to do with it, too. Remember, Pittsburgh, for better or worse, is a remarkable run-producing ball club. The Pirates have been getting to all the pitchers in the league—nervous or calm as jellyfish—for these six-run innings. The buy at the plate can wallop the ball, and so can the next guy and the one after him. It is most discouraging to pitchers old and young.

Undoubtedly, Higbe tends to lose control of his stuff when riled. Strange to say, this is characteristic of almost every young pitcher I have ever seen. They don't make Walter Johnsons or Mathewsons to order. Dizzy Dean, in his early days, blew up very frequently when his nerves were twanged. Experience taught Diz to keep cool, and I figure it will teach Higbe also.

He is one of the most valuable properties to wear a Philadelphia uniform in recent years. I hope he doesn't take what he hears too seriously. If he does, he may cease very soon to be valuable to anyone.

Wyatt Outpitches Errickson in 2-1 Dodger Triumph

Boston Bees Bow on One Fatal Let-Up in Fifth Inning

BROOKLYN, June 28 (AP)—Whitlow Wyatt outpitched young Dick Errickson today to bring the Brooklyn Dodgers a 2 to 1 victory over the Boston Bees in an eight-inning game halted by rain.

The Dodgers' star right hander held the Bees to five hits and struck out six in achieving his seventh triumph of the year.

Errickson was just as effective except for a fatal letup in the fifth inning when Brooklyn bagged four of its seven hits and both its runs.

Peewee Reese and Cookie Lavagetto opened with singles and after Dixie Walker lined into a double play, Joe Medwick singled Reese home and Babe Phelps doubled to score Medwick.

The only run Boston tallied against Wyatt developed out of an error in the second inning, when Phil Masi was safe on a high throw by Reese, went to third on a single by Errickson and scored on a forceout by Buddy Hassett.

East and West Side Win Carriers Games

The East Side and West Side teams scored Times-News Carriers Softball League victories Thursday at Community Park, the East Siders tripping North End, 8-2, and the latter team nosing out South End, 13 to 11. The wins were the second straight for each team in the league which got underway this week.

Phil Minke permitted only four hits for East Side in the opening tussle, while his mates gathered nine off the slants of Sangouani. The winners crowded all of their scoring into the first three stanzas. Ronald Armbruster led East Side's attack with two licks in three trips to the plate.

Four pitchers, two for each team, saw action in the high-scoring affair between West Side and South End. Lindsay was the winning hurler, although relieved by J. Bender midway in the game. Welsh started for the losers but was replaced by "Pete" Chamberlain, who was charged with his second loss.

Bender and Knick were the top bombers for the winning team with seven bingles between them. The league schedule will resume next Tuesday morning with East Side playing West Side and North End engaging South End. Yesterday's scores:

NORTH END	000	110	0—2 4 1

Charlie Gelbert Bats Nats to 4-3 Win over Red Sox

"Dutch" Leonard Victor In Ten Inning Contest

BOSTON, June 28 (AP) — Charlie Gelbert's big bat, combined with seven hit pitching by Emil "Dutch" Leonard, gave the lowly Washington Senators a 4-3 ten-inning victory today over the Boston Red Sox.

Gelbert lashed out two doubles and a single to drive in three Washington runs, his second two-baser sending Cecil Travis home with the winning tally in the tenth after the Senator third baseman had singled and moved to second on Buddy Myer's sacrifice.

Leonard chalked up his ninth victory of the campaign and enabled his team to climb out of the cellar as Philadelphia dropped one to the New York Yankees.

Cronin sent the game into an extra inning with a double in the ninth after Ted Williams had walked and was sent along to third by a Tabor sacrifice and Leonard's wild pitch.

Westernport, June 28—Boals tossers went into a second-place tie with the Wolverines in the Tri-Towns Softball League this week by taking a doubleheader from the cellar-dwelling WPA-Legion team. The Boal outfit annexed the first game by a 6-0 score and captured the nightcap, a postponed affair, by an 8-2 count.

The Mosts advanced a notch in the standing by handing the McIntyre Bakers a 16-3 lacing in the league's other engagement, the victory putting the Most crew in a fifth-place tie with the Eagles and dropping the Big Boys to seventh position.

Tommy Campbell allowed only two hits as he fed the Legionnaires on a goose-egg diet in the first game of the twin bill. Allan Martin and Campbell each secured two bingles for the winners while Frankie Greco got both the losers' safeties. Lambert sparked the Boal victory in the second game with a trio of socks, with Greco again the batting star for the Legion outfit with a triple.

Mosts' win over McIntyre, their fourth in a row, was featured by the airtight flinging of Don Smith who allowed the Bakers only four hits. Mox Griffin carried away hitting honors with three bingles in four trips while Bartlett got two of the losers' four swats. The scores:

Capitalist Says He Was Offered Yankees in Sale

But Ruppert Trustee Says No Such Sale Was Authorized

CINCINNATI, June 28 (AP)—Cecil H. Gamble, Cincinnati capitalist, said late today he had been offered the New York Yankees' baseball club for $6,000,000 but had rejected the proposal.

The offer was made in mid-May, in a telephone conversation from New York, with a man whose name Gamble said he did not recall.

"He apparently spoke with authority," Gamble said.

"I don't know why I was approached, because buying a baseball club is the last thing I would think of."

The offer included the world champions and their farm system, including approximately 290 players.

NEW YORK, June 28 (AP)—George Ruppert, one of the trustees operating the New York Yankees for the estate of the late Col. Jacob Ruppert, said today he knew of no developments toward a sale of the ball club.

Commenting in a report from Cincinnati that the world champions had been offered to Cecil B. Gamble, Ruppert declared he was certain no such offer had been authorized.

Junior Softball Loop Formed Here

Franchises went to the North End Merchant Juniors, Police Boys' Club West Siders, Police Boys' Club South Enders and the LaSalle Jupers.

Two other berths will be kept open until Monday evening at 8:15 when another meeting will be held at Chisholm's home, but if no applications are received at that time the loop race will start Wednesday, July 3, on a four-club basis.

Chisholm was elected president and William Cumiskey secretary-treasurer at last night's session. League rules, adopted at the meeting, set a player limit of 17 and specify that all tossers must be under 18 years of age. No team will be permitted to sign players after the end of the first half race.

The schedule will call for each team to play three games a week. All contests will begin at 4 p .m. A draft of the schedule will be presented, umpires approved and other organization matters considered at Monday's meeting.

GOLF'S HALL OF FAME

The P. G. A., meaning the Professional Golfers' Association, is concluding arrangements to establish golf's Hall of Fame for the United States. We suggested this idea some months back, and now Tom Walsh and Freddie Corcoran are completing a plan to carry the matter through along correct lines.

The plan is to have a small, acting committee composed of those who have written golf for over thirty years and so have most of the background needed for the earlier days of play. But the actual voting will be carried on by a far larger group, representing every section of the country's golfing press.

The plan also will include the names of only four or five stars in the first selection, to be made from the champions who have paraded U. S. fairways in the last forty or more years. After this first selection is named, there will be additions voted upon each year, largely after the manner of baseball's similar hall of lasting luminaries.

THE LONG LIST

The list of our leading stars is both long and brilliant. There will be many arguments after the first few are fixed in their higher places, especially when the yearly additions face the vote.

In this list the electors have the following cast, in partial array, to pick from:

For example, there are only five men who have won both the U. S. and British Opens. They are Walter Hagen, Bobby Jones, Gene Sarazen, Jim Barnes and Tommy Armour.

There are only three players who have won the U. S. and British amateur championships. They are Jess Sweetser, Bobby Jones and Lawson Little.

There are only six players who have won both the U. S. amateur and the U. S. Open—they are Francis Ouimet, Jerry Travers, Chick Evans, Bobby Jones, Johnny Goodman and Lawson Little.

There are only four entries who have won the P. G. A., the British and the U. S. Open. They are Hagen, Sarazen, Armour and Barnes.

Jones is the lone entry who has won the U. S. Open, the British Open, the U. S. Amateur and the British Amateur. He was never eligible for the P. G. A.

Denny Shute has won the P. G. A. and the British Open.

FOUR DIVISIONS

There are really four divisions or epochs in U. S. golf:

1. The domination of the Scotch and English for so many of the earlier years — Anderson, Smith, Auchterlonie, and others.

2. The advent of John J. McDermott, ex-caddie, who first cracked this monopoly in 1911 and 1912.

3. The Ouimet miracle at Brookline in 1913 that sent the lure of the game spinning to more than a million kids—that took golf from the society to the sporting pages.

4. The arrival of Bobby Jones and his thirteen national titles acquired in just eight years before he stepped aside.

To this you can also add the rare flares of color that Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazen brought to golf—to ex-caddies who have picked up a triple share of gold and glory for well over 20 years.

TWO AMAZING RECORDS

Two of the most amazing records were written for golf history by Bobby Jones and Walter Hagen.

Jones, by running 1-2 in the U. S. Open through a matter of eight out of nine years against brilliant competition.

Hagen, by winning something like 23 consecutive P. G. A. matches, 28 out of 29, in five successive, P. G. A. title tournaments against the pick of professional golf.

To these one might add Lawson Little's feat in winning 31 consecutive battles in the U. S. and British Amateur championships.

To those who know the fickleness of golf, its touch and timing, its bizarre breaks, all the many things that can happen even in one match, these three achievements write their own story of the near-impossible.

WEALTH OF MATERIAL

This brief summary shows the wealth of material now awaiting inspection by the Hall of Fame committee.

In just a few brief discussions here and there we have already found a sharp division of opinion after we get by the first four or five—Jones, Ouimet, Hagen, Sarazen, to suggest the upper bracket.

After these four the flow of oratory became almost turbulent when such names as Travers, McDermott, Evans, Anderson and others were drawing comparisons in the bunkered realm of accomplishment.

Swarthmore Golf Star Has College Crown in Grasp

Harry Haverstick Gains Final Round with Sterling Play

MANCHESTER, Vt., June 28. (AP)—Harry Haverstick of Swarthmore appeared to have the 1940 National Collegiate A. A. golf championship in his grasp today when he gained the final round by playing 31 holes in four under par against two capable opponents.

The Swarthmore senior, who eliminated Stewart (Skippy) Alexander of Duke, 3 and 2, and Bill Cordingley of Harvard, 4 and 3, will engage F. Dixon Brooke of Virginia in tomorrow's North-South 36-hole title match.

Brooke went four over par, going 33 holes with Cary Middlecoff of Mississippi, who bowed out of the quarter-finals, 3 and 2, and Eddie Foy of Holy Cross, his 2 and 1 victim.

Much of Haverstick's success was due to his deadly chipping. He also rapped in hole-winning putts up to 20 feet. The Sparthmore star was down only once during the day, to Allender, but he wiped out a two-hole margin by birdie-ing the ninth and 10th holes.

Brooke was even par for his 16 holes against Middlecoff, who found himself three down at the turn, but the Cavalier's game tapered off a bit during the afternoon. He was forced to trail Foy by a stroke when Foy got a birdie deuce with a five-footer on the 190-yard sixth. Brooke won the seventh and eighth to go one up before Booth rounded the turn with 37's and he also outscored his rival on the 13th.

Foy qualified for the semi-finals by defeating Bill Clark of Dartmouth, 4 and 2, and in the other third-rounder Cordingly outplayed Bill Hall of Iowa State, a semi-finalist at Des Moiner last year for a 2 and 1 victory.

Rockingchair League Argument Adds Fuel To Fire as Cops Lose

The controversy that threatens to rage in the Rockingchair Softball League was fanned to a white heat last evening when the Bluecoats of the Police Department (aided and abetted by city employes of other departments who can bat better than some Bluecoats, even without expert training in pounding a pantoon "saw red" after Jolly Jim Winkinson, cause of contention, throttled the Policeman's last inning rally for the Junior Association of Commerce which won the contest therewith, therefore and thereby, 14-13.

The Police Department Bluecoats could readily have invoked their prerogative of putting the handcuffs on the orators of the Junior Chamber, and vice-versa, for people have been locked up for less disturbance of the peace on the streets.

The Cops and their cohorts were trailing, 13-6, when they took their turn at thumping in the seventh, and they drove Cowherd all over the pasture with seven runs ambling in before Wilkinson was shifted from second base to the slinging box. He gave a double to Davis but Shober went out, pitcher to first, and Davis was docketed at third as Maphis fanned.

The Junior Association collared Chisholm for 11 bingles, including a homer by Hetzel and a triple by White, with four doubles for good measure. The Cops clouted six doubles and two triples, Stitcher and Shober socking the latter in the collection of 20 hits.

Line score:

POLICE	000	132	7—13 20 5
JR. ASSN.	251	014	1—14 11 0

Chisholm and H. Stitcher; Cowherd, Wilkinson and Ley.

Only Mel Ott, Paul and Lloyd Waner and Chuck Klein, among the National league players, have garnered more than 2,000 hits in their careers.

Bill Werber is the champion base stealer in the National league. His yearly average is 20.

No-Hit Vander Meer Returns to Minors

Goes to Red Farm To Seek Control He Lost in 1938

Has Lost Only Two Starts of Season after Flop in 1939

Illness Added to His Troubles in Wake of Fame

CINCINNATI, June 28 (AP) — Johnny Vander Meer of the National League champion Reds voluntarily returned to the minors today in quest of control that carried him to the heights in 1938 when he became the only major leaguer ever to hurl two successive no-hit, no-games.

He was optioned at his own request to Indianapolis of the American Association, a Red farm, with provision for quick recall.

Then, on the night of June 11, on Crosley field, he catapulted to baseball's peak with a 3 to 0 no-hitter over Boston.

Four nights later, on June 15, he duplicated the feat with a 6 to 0 victory over the Dodgers on their home lot.

Vandy's name was on everyone's lips but although he finished the year with 15 wins and 10 losses, he never showed the control that before had offset a curious freedom with bases on balls.

Plagued by a sore arm and abdominal trouble early in 1939, he won only five and lost nine games during the Reds' flag drive and this year was batted from the box early in each of two starts.

Double Trouble

DENVER (AP)—Anything can happen to you if you play baseball long enough.

This is what happened to Judy Cline, a professional and semi-pro outfielder for more than 25 years, in a Colorado semi-pro league game:

With a man on first, a Pueblo batter hit a fly to Judy in left field. Judy dropped the ball for error No. 1. He retrieved it, started to throw and the ball slipped out of his hand and rolled into centerfield. That was error No. 2 and both men scored.

Egg-Septional Golf

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Roy Culbertson, playing a 148-yard shot to the green, hooked into a big tree to the left.

The ball scared a bird which fluttered out onto the green and laid an egg, but the ball was nowhere to be found.

Culbertson, after a conference with his companions, played the egg for a birdie two — and immediately declared he had scored two birdies on one hole.

First Sackers Must Hit!

NEW YORK (AP) — Babe Dahlgren is called by many experts the greatest fielding first sacker since George Sisler but Babe still is in danger of losing his job. First base is one spot where teams figure they cannot "carry" a weak hitter. And the Yankees, lacking some of the punch of other years and needing a strong finish to get back in the pennant fight, may have to shelve Babe for an inferior fielder but surer hitter.

Saturday baseball is not scheduled in the Florida East Coast League. The clubs acted to gain the good will of business men.

Only 19 Hub City Teams for Match Play Here Today

Hagerstown Golfers To Have Small Squad on CCC Links

Hagerstown golfers yesterday informed Henry W. Price, Cumberland Country Club golf team captain, that they would be able to bring only nineteen teams, or thirty-eight players, to Cumberland for the first of the annual home-and-home matches between golfers of the two clubs.

Price had already compiled a roster of more than fifty players as eligibles for the Cumberland team, but he said last night that Hagerstown's announcement would mean that some of these players would not be able to compete. He announced, however, that he would use as many as possible in the team match and that those unable to play would not have to forefit their Saturday afternoon game but would be asked to make up foursomes of their own.

The match will begin at 1:15 p. m. and the teams will tee off at five-minute intervals thereafter, depending upon the arrival of the Hagerstown golfers. In order to avoid congestion, it is intended to start the teams on both No. 1 and No. 10 tees, simultaneously, and on several other holes if the necessity arises.

A buffet luncheon will be served in the newly-remodeled men's locker room after the match. Te Hagerstown players have been invited to attend.

Pittard Puts LaNeve Out of City Net Tourney

In a men's doubles match at the Dingle Richard Hosey and E. Winters humbled Robert King and Dave Davis, 6-1, 6-8, 6-1.

Beavers Show Uncanny Skill at Tree Felling

The almost uncanny ability of beaver, most famous of wildlife engineers, to fell trees of considerable size almost exactly where they wish to place them is one of the marvels of the out-of-doors to human observers.

The trees, as is well known, are felled by being gnawed completely around at a height of approximately a foot above the ground, and are almost invaribly cut so that they fall with the tops toward the body of water in which the beaver are living, says "The Detroit News."

Poplars are the most popular trees for the beaver. The tops are used for food, the smaller twigs being entirely eaten while the larger branches are stripped of their bark. In some streams great quantities of brush and some trees or branches as large as three inches in diameter are used in construction of dams to form ponds where the beaver build their lodges.

Although fairly common in many parts of Michigan, and although evidence of their presence is often seen, the animals themselves are rarely glimpsed except as they may be seen swimming the lakes or streams just before darkness cloaks their activities. They are almost completely nocturnal in their habits.

S. E. Booster Jr. Loop

The South End Merchants kept their slate clean in the South End Booster Junior League by defeating Savings Bank yesterday 7-4.

Harold Hipsley and Bernie Orndorff hit homers while Guy Smith had a perfect day at bat with a double and two singles. O'Donnell held the losers to three hits while the Merchants got 13 off Swick.

Only one game is scheduled in the circuit today with the R. C. Colas meeting Savings Bank at 10:30 this morning.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, June 28 (AP)—Max Baer and Tony Galento, those two striking examples of the simple life, or maybe it should be simple examples of the striking life, meet next Tuesday in Jersey City, and what they have in the way of qualifications for their profession is more than offset by what they don't have.

To begin with, the affair is laughingly billed as a boxing contest. In the cases of both Max and Tony any resemblance of their performances to boxing is coincidental and without malice aforethought.

Tony doesn't have a right hand. Max doesn't have a left hand. Both have offset these deficiencies by developing a backhand.

Neither is an up-and-coming youngster nearing his peak. Max reached his some years ago, and Tony probably is no better or no worse than he was on his best day.

Partialy balancing these shortcomings from a spectator standpoint are the facts that both are lusty, powerful specimens of manhood possessed of wallops, and they have enough in common to leave the opinion that anything might happen.

One man might foul out.

Baer might walk out if Galento gets rough.

Galento might walk out if Baer gets rough.

The fans might walk out if neither gets rough.

Some lover of clean sportsmanship might haul out a six-gun and plug both gents.

Both men have been talking a great fight, getting about 12 bums to the mile of their gas. In fact, after listening to both parties, it's difficult to determine who is calling the other fighter a bum and who is calling the other bum a fighter.

On the face of it, the fight is a difficult one to forecast. Galento, despite the handicap of a balloon chasis, can hit with his left like nobody's business, and he has the heart of a tiger.

Baer outwardly still is a superb specimen physically. He can hit with his right, but on occasion he has shown no heart for his work.

If he thinks he can beat Galento, and the old victory urge returns, he may do it. In fact, just as a guess, we think he will, bearing in mind the sage remark of Joe Louis:

"The one who gets cut first will lose."

Rain Calls Halt to College Tennis Meet

HAVERFORD, Pa., June 28 (AP)—Defending champion Frank Guernsey, of Rice, and Bill Talbert, of Cincinnati, advanced to the semi-finals of the national intercollegiate tennis championships today.

Just before a downpour of rain forced postponement of the two other quarter-finals matches, Guernsey defeated Bill Canning, of California, 6-3, 6-1, while Talbert Eliminated Ted Schroeder, of Southern California, 6-4, 6-4.

After waiting for more than two hours Referee Charles Beard postponed until tomorrow the scheduled matches between Isadore Bellis, of Pennsylvania, and Joe Hunt, Navy, and top-seeded Don McNeill, of Kenyon, and Bill Reedy, of Southern California.

One doubles match in the quarter-finals was played before the rain. Robert Harmon and Robert Peacock, of California, beat Gordon Giles and Frank Mehner, of Utah, 6-1, 6-4

Undefeated Trio Of Juveniles To Vie in Christiana

Chances Are About 18,000 to 1 They Won't Run Dead Heat

DELAWARE PARK, June 28.—During 1939 approximately 18,000 horse races were run in the United States and Canada combined.

In only 291 of those events did two horses finish in a dead heat for a share of the purse, and only on one occasion were three horses so closely locked at the wire that they could not be separated by the electric eye of the camera.

On that basis, it is about 18,000 to 1 that the three undefeated colts scheduled to run in tomorrow's $5,000 Christiana Stakes here won't remain on the unbeaten list. Also it is very unlikely that two of the juveniles will keep their records unblemished.

However, it seems a sure thing that one of the undefeated colts will continue his winning ways, for the trio is by far the class of the probable field for the five-and-a-half-furlong dash.

Blensign Rated Ace

These unbeaten thoroughbreds are H. Guy Bedwell's Blensign, newest pride of Maryland race fans; Mrs. E. Graham Lewis' Chicuelo, invader from the New York circuit, and Ella K. Bryson's Magic Stream, another Marylander.

Blensign is the most experienced of the three baby racers. This son of Blenheim (the American Blenheim) and Design made his first start in the Ral Parr Stakes at Pimlico and won by a narrow margin from Nannykins, which had made six previous starts.

From Pimlico, Trainer Bedwell moved his charge to Belmont Park, where he had little trouble winning an overnight allowance race before shipping here to be first across the line in the $4,000 Dover Stakes, which he won by two lengths.

While Blensign was on the side lines recovering from bruised hocks suffered in the Dover, Magic Stream made two starts and showed his heels to top-ranking juveniles on each occasion.

The result of a mating of Coldstream and Witchcraft, Magic Stream, a victim of the coughing epidemic during the spring in Maryland, made his first start on June 6 and, after being fourth at the head of the lane, got up to win by a nose in the middle of the track from Sun Thrush.

Although that was a hard race for a first-time starter, Trainer Joe Serio, Jr., of Baltimore, sent Magic Stream to the post again only four days later and was rewarded with a half-length victory. Behind the Marylander were such youngsters as Buckboard, Snarler and Scout Time.

El Chico Fans Interested

There is much interest in the activity of Chicuelo due to the fact that the son of Ariel and La Chica is a half-brother to William L. Ziegler, Jr.'s El Chico, the leading 2-year-old of 1938.

Trainer Hugh Rufford had been informed of Chicuelo's good speed, so he asked the youngster to make his first start in the Tremont Stakes at Aqueduct and watched the colt win by three parts of a length from War Biscuit.

No-Hit Vander Meer Returns to Minors

Goes to Red Farm To Seek Control He Lost in 1938

Has Lost Only Two Starts of Season after Flop in 1939

Illness Added to His Troubles in Wake of Fame

CINCINNATI, June 28 (AP) — Johnny Vander Meer of the National League champion Reds voluntarily returned to the minors today in quest of control that carried him to the heights in 1938 when he became the only major leaguer ever to hurl two successive no-hit, no-games.

He was optioned at his own request to Indianapolis of the American Association, a Red farm, with provision for quick recall.

Then, on the night of June 11, on Crosley field, he catapulted to baseball's peak with a 3 to 0 no-hitter over Boston.

Four nights later, on June 15, he duplicated the feat with a 6 to 0 victory over the Dodgers on their home lot.

Vandy's name was on everyone's lips but although he finished the year with 15 wins and 10 losses, he never showed the control that before had offset a curious freedom with bases on balls.

Plagued by a sore arm and abdominal trouble early in 1939, he won only five and lost nine games during the Reds' flag drive and this year was batted from the box early in each of two starts.

Cubs Take Reds 3-2 Behind Fine Hurling of Mooty

Chicago Batsmen Jump on Paul Derringer for 11 Hits

CINCINNATI— June 28, (AP) — The six-hit pitching of Jake Mooty led the Cubs to a 3-2 victory over the league leading Reds tonight. Chicago batters jumped on Paul Derringer for 11 hits.

Double Trouble

DENVER (AP)—Anything can happen to you if you play baseball long enough.

This is what happened to Judy Cline, a professional and semi-pro outfielder for more than 25 years, in a Colorado semi-pro league game:

With a man on first, a Pueblo batter hit a fly to Judy in left field. Judy dropped the ball for error No. 1. He retrieved it, started to throw and the ball slipped out of his hand and rolled into centerfield. That was error No. 2 and both men scored.

Egg-Septional Golf

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Roy Culbertson, playing a 148-yard shot to the green, hooked into a big tree to the left.

The ball scared a bird which fluttered out onto the green and laid an egg, but the ball was nowhere to be found.

Culbertson, after a conference with his companions, played the egg for a birdie two — and immediately declared he had scored two birdies on one hole.

First Sackers Must Hit!

NEW YORK (AP) — Babe Dahlgren is called by many experts the greatest fielding first sacker since George Sisler but Babe still is in danger of losing his job. First base is one spot where teams figure they cannot "carry" a weak hitter. And the Yankees, lacking some of the punch of other years and needing a strong finish to get back in the pennant fight, may have to shelve Babe for an inferior fielder but better hitter.

Saturday baseball is not scheduled in the Florida East Coast league. The clubs acted to gain the good will of business men.

Only 19 Hub City Teams for Match Play Here Today

Hagerstown Golfers To Have Small Squad on CCC Links

Hagerstown golfers yesterday informed Henry W. Price, Cumberland Country Club golf team captain, that they would be able to bring only nineteen teams, or thirty-eight players, to Cumberland for the first of the annual home-and-home matches between golfers of the two clubs.

Price had already compiled a roster of more than fifty players as eligibles for the Cumberland team, but he said last night that Hagerstown's announcement would mean that some of these players would not be able to compete. He announced, however, that he would use as many as possible in the team match and that those unable to play would not have to forefit their Saturday afternoon game but would be asked to make up foursomes of their own.

The match will begin at 1:15 p. m. and the teams will tee off at five-minute intervals thereafter, depending upon the arrival of the Hagerstown golfers. In order to avoid congestion, it is intended to start the teams on both No. 1 and No. 10 tees, simultaneously, and on several other holes if the necessity arises.

A buffet luncheon will be served in the newly-remodeled men's locker room after the match. Te Hagerstown players have been invited to attend.

Pittard Puts LaNeve Out of City Net Tourney

The city tennis tournament continued today on the Dingle courts with Winston Pittard conquering his third opponent in the men's singles, Leo LaNeve, 6-0 10-8.

In a men's doubles match at the Dingle Richard Hosey and E. Winters humbled Robert King and Dave Davis, 6-1, 6-8, 6-1.

Robert Bane and Ross Palmer teaming up in doubles also advanced with a 6-3, 7-5 decision over David Weiss and J. Walton.

A men's singles match between Walter Harris and W. E. Hinkel was won by Hinkel by default. Robert Bane will meet Hinkel today at 4 p. m. on the Dingle courts.

L. E. Van Sant and Maurice Bernstein will also play Harry and Dave Kauffman at 4 p. m. at the Dingle today in a doubles match.

Other matches are scheduled for this afternoon at the Country Club and Garlitz courts.

Beavers Show Uncanny Skill at Tree Felling

The almost uncanny ability of beaver, most famous of wildlife engineers, to fell trees of considerable size almost exactly where they wish to place them is one of the marvels of the out-of-doors to human observers.

The trees, as is well known, are felled by being gnawed completely around at a height of approximately a foot above the ground, and are almost invaribly cut so that they fall with the tops toward the body of water in which the beaver are living, says "The Detroit News."

Poplars are the most popular trees for the beaver. The tops are used for food, the smaller twigs being entirely eaten while the larger branches are stripped of their bark. In some streams great quantities of brush and some trees or branches as large as three inches in diameter are used in construction of dams to form ponds where the beaver build their lodges.

Although fairly common in many parts of Michigan, and although evidence of their presence is often seen, the animals themselves are rarely glimpsed except as they may be seen swimming the lakes or streams just before darkness cloaks their activities. They are almost completely nocturnal in their habits.

S. E. Booster Jr. Loop

The South End Merchants kept their slate clean in the South End Booster Junior League by defeating Savings Bank yesterday 7-4.

Harold Hipsley and Bernie Orndorff hit homers while Guy Smith had a perfect day at bat with a double and two singles. O'Donnell held the losers to three hits while the Merchants got 13 off Swick.

Only one game is scheduled in the circuit today with the R. C. Colas meeting Savings Bank at 10:30 this morning.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, June 28 (AP)—Max Baer and Tony Galento, those two striking examples of the simple life, or maybe it should be simple examples of the striking life, meet next Tuesday in Jersey City, and what they have in the way of qualifications for their profession is more than offset by what they don't have.

To begin with, the affair is laughingly billed as a boxing contest. In the cases of both Max and Tony any resemblance of their performances to boxing is coincidental and without malice aforethought.

Tony doesn't have a right hand. Max doesn't have a left hand. Both have offset these deficiencies by developing a backhand.

Neither is an up-and-coming youngster nearing his peak. Max reached his some years ago, and Tony probably is no better or no worse than he was on his best day.

Neither, if occasion demands, will try to remember everything in the rule book.

Partialy balancing these shortcomings from a spectator standpoint are the facts that both are lusty, powerful specimens of manhood possessed of wallops, and they have enough in common to leave the opinion that anything might happen.

Which is another angle. The bout might have more endings than a mystery story.

One man might score a clean knockout.

One man might be cut so badly the fight would be stopped.

One man might foul out.

Both men might foul out.

Both men might be sitting on the canvas too weary to move.

Baer might walk out if Galento gets rough.

Galento might walk out if Baer gets rough.

The fans might walk out if neither gets rough.

Some lover of clean sportsmanship might haul out a six-gun and plug both gents.

Both men have been talking a great fight, getting about 12 bums to the mile of their gas. In fact, after listening to both parties, it's difficult to determine who is calling the other fighter a bum and who is calling the other bum a fighter.

On the face of it, the fight is a difficult one to forecast. Galento, despite the handicap of a balloon chasis, can hit with his left like nobody's business, and he has the heart of a tiger.

Baer outwardly still is a superb specimen physically. He can hit with his right, but on occasion he has shown no heart for his work.

If he thinks he can beat Galento, and the old victory urge returns, he may do it. In fact, just as a guess, we think he will, bearing in mind the sage remark of Joe Louis:

"The one who gets cut first will lose."

Rain Calls Halt to College Tennis Meet

HAVERFORD, Pa., June 28 (AP)—Defending champion Frank Guernsey, of Rice, and Bill Talbert, of Cincinnati, advanced to the semi-finals of the national intercollegiate tennis championships today.

Just before a downpour of rain forced postponement of the two other quarter-finals matches, Guernsey defeated Bill Canning, of California, 6-3, 6-1, while Talbert Eliminated Ted Schroeder, of Southern California, 6-4, 6-4.

After waiting for more than two hours Referee Charles Beard postponed until tomorrow the scheduled matches between Isadore Bellis, of Pennsylvania, and Joe Hunt, Navy, and top-seeded Don McNeill, of Kenyon, and Bill Reedy, of Southern California.

One doubles match in the quarter-finals was played before the rain. Robert Harmon and Robert Peacock, of California, beat Gordon Giles and Frank Mehner, of Utah, 6-1, 6-4

Undefeated Trio Of Juveniles To Vie in Christiana

Chances Are About 18,000 to 1 They Won't Run Dead Heat

DELAWARE PARK, June 28.—During 1939 approximately 18,000 horse races were run in the United States and Canada combined.

In only 291 of those events did two horses finish in a dead heat for a share of the purse, and only on one occasion were three horses so closely locked at the wire that they could not be separated by the electric eye of the camera.

On that basis, it is about 18,000 to 1 that the three undefeated colts scheduled to run in tomorrow's $5,000 Christiana Stakes here won't remain on the unbeaten list. Also it is very unlikely that two of the juveniles will keep their records unblemished.

However, it seems a sure thing that one of the undefeated colts will continue his winning ways, for the trio is by far the class of the probable field for the five-and-a-half-furlong dash.

Blensign Rated Ace

These unbeaten thoroughbreds are H. Guy Bedwell's Blensign, newest pride of Maryland race fans; Mrs. E. Graham Lewis' Chicuelo, invader from the New York circuit, and Ella K. Bryson's Magic Stream, another Marylander.

Blensign is the most experienced of the three baby racers. This son of Blenheim (the American Blenheim) and Design made his first start in the Ral Parr Stakes at Pimlico and won by a narrow margin from Nannykins, which had made six previous starts.

From Pimlico, Trainer Bedwell moved his charge to Belmont Park, where he had little trouble winning an overnight allowance race before shipping here to be first across the line in the $4,000 Dover Stakes, which he won by two lengths.

While Blensign was on the side lines recovering from bruised hocks suffered in the Dover, Magic Stream made two starts and showed his heels to top-ranking juveniles on each occasion.

The result of a mating of Coldstream and Witchcraft, Magic Stream, a victim of the coughing epidemic during the spring in Maryland, made his first start on June 6 and, after being fourth at the head of the lane, got up to win by a nose in the middle of the track from Sun Thrush.

Although that was a hard race for a first-time starter, Trainer Joe Serio, Jr., of Baltimore, sent Magic Stream to the post again only four days later and was rewarded with a half-length victory. Behind the Marylander were such youngsters as Buckboard, Snarler and Scout Time.

El Chico Fans Interested

There is much interest in the activity of Chicuelo due to the fact that the son of Ariel and La Chica is a half-brother to William L. Ziegler, Jr.'s El Chico, the leading 2-year-old of 1938.

Trainer Hugh Rufford had been informed of Chicuelo's good speed, so he asked the youngster to make his first start in the Tremont Stakes at Aqueduct and watched the colt win by three parts of a length from War Biscuit.

April, 1940	14,214

Payroll

May, 1940	$1,687,582.69

Insurance Asked In Vogel Case

Payment Refused, Petitions Declare

Suits against two insurance companies demanding payment of some $30,000 worth of insurance were filed in Circuit Court yesterday by the widow of a well-known Cumberland man found dead in a downtown office building Jan. 12.

The suits were filed by Mrs. Mary Catherine Vogel, widow of F. William Vogel, against the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York and the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

Vogel, 47, a shoe salesman, was found dead the morning of Jan. 12 with a .32 calibre revolver bullet wound in his body. He was found in a washroom a short distance from his office on the second floor of the building at 121 Baltimore street.

"Cleaning gun, went off," was the terse note authorities found in Vogel's office.

Following an investigation, Dr. Linne H. Corson, deputy medical examiner, issued a verdict of accidental death. Dr. Corson hung his verdict on two main pegs which were:

1. That the victim lived for some time after the bullet entered his body.

2. That the victim, who managed to walk to the washroom after the bullet entered his body, could have scrawled the four words in the note.

The suit docketed by Attorney Lewis M. Wilson asks $25,000 from the Mutual Life Insurance Company citing the fact that the policy carried by Vogel entitles his widow to double idemnity provided proof is furnished that death was caused by external, accidental means.

The sum of $5,000 was asked from the Metropolitan in accordance with the terms of a policy purchased by Vogel in 1929.

Payment of the two amounts named has been neglected and refused since January, the petition declared.

Warns Employers of Idle Tax Deadline Today

Employers who are back in their 1939 payments required under State and Federal unemployment compensation laws have been warned that they have until today to settle their accounts without being liable to the maximum rate of 5.7 per cent. and interest.

Officials of the Maryland Unemployment Compensation Board, who issued the dead-line warning, stated that employers who paid their 1939 State contribution before last January 31 were allowed the maximum ninety per cent credit on their Federal tax, while those paying between that date and June 29 are entitled to only eighty-one per cent credit.

Ten New Blue Ridge Buses, Costing $178,000, Begin Operations Today

Ten new air-conditioned buses recently purchased by Blue Ridge Lines will begin operation today over the Blue Ridge route from Washington, D. C., and Baltimore to Pittsburgh, according to A. F. McDonald, general manager of the company.

The new buses were placed on public exhibition for the first time in Cumberland Thursday afternoon and evening near the Fort Cumberland hotel.

Each bus is equipped with automatic air-conditioning equipment, that provides cool air in summer and warm air in winter. The huge no-draft ventilating system, with a capacity to completely change the air in the bus every minute and a half, filters, deodorizes and circulates it through individual grilles under each seat the year around. Thermostatic controls keep the temperature constantly at the proper level.

Buses Cost $17,800 Each

Costing $17,80 each these buses are said to be the most modern on American highways. This luxury coach is powered by the biggest engine that is available for this type of equipment and incidentally, is the biggest bus engine in the country. Each of these new buses weighs over ten tons and carries 200-gallon gas tanks.

The most radical departure from the conventional arrangement of the inside of a bus is the removal of the baggage racks from over the passengers' heads. "Bridges" of eight "spans" on one side of the aisle and of seven "spans" on the other side permits the ten cubic feet space under each "span" to be used for baggage. The passenger's feet then occupy the hollow "abutment" of the bridge and more leg-room is thereby created. All of the old drawbacks and objections to overhead baggage racks are thus obviated.

New Lighting Feature

Another feature of the new bus interior is the full bus length light band in the ceiling over the aisle, eliminating the numerous former "spot-lights," and thus giving a softer and better distributed light inside the bus at night.

Individual arm chairs of an entirely new design are built with a combination rubber and spring cushion and recline to four different positions. More room has been provided between the seats and new type foot rests are provided.

Safety controls and refinements in addition to those present in the previous fleet have been incorporated in this new equipment.

Friends of Demoted City Police Officers Circulate Petition

A petition that has been in circulation for several days, urging the mayor and city council to restore William M. Connell, Raymond Johnston and B. Frank Gaffney to their former posts on the Cumberland Police Department, had gained hundreds of signers last night and probably will be presented to the "city fathers" at their regular meeting Monday morning.

The petition follows on the heels of an order passed by a 3 to 2 vote last Monday, demoting Messrs. Connell, Gaffney and Johnston from the rank of sergeant and reducing their salaries from $140 to $135 a month.

The petition was drawn up by an attorney on the advice of friends of officers who figured in the shakeup in the police department.

Changes in the department are to become effective Monday, July 1, the same day on which the council meets but Police Commissioner James Orr, who introduced the order, will be spending his vacation in California at the time.

Celanese Boosts Indebtedness to Fifty Million

Expansion Plan To Get Consideration, Officials Say

Prior preferred stockholders of Celanese Corporation of America have approved management plans for increasing the company's indebtedness from $20,000,000 to $50,000,000 in order to provide new funds for plant expansion, funding and other corporate needs.

Common stockholders approved these recommendations at a meeting on June 20, but because of the late arrival of proxies from European holders there was not a sufficient number of prior preferred proxies at the meeting to approve the proposals by that class of stockholders.

The new indebtedness could be bonds, debentures or other forms, as determined by the directors.

Company officials said after the meeting no new plans for further expansion of plants or other improvements were in immediate prospect, but that such plans would undoubtedly receive early consideration now that the financing end of the program had been cleared up.

The company in addition to operating a large plant here, has plants at Celco, Va., New London, Conn., Williamsport, Pa., Newark and Arlington, N. J.

Conlon Approves Insurance Bid

Accepts Barnes and Barnard Figure

Recommendation that the insurance contract for protection of the city's motor vehicles be awarded Barnes and Barnard, of the Clark-Keating building, will be made in an order to be presented the mayor and city council Monday, it was announced last night by Thomas F. Conlon, finance commissioner.

Bids for fleet insurance were received yesterday with Barnes and Barnard as the low bidder, their figure having been $1,042.43 or fifty cents below the bid of Martin and Martin whose offer was $1,042.93. Other bidders were: Samuel Weatherholt $1,107.16; M. D. Reinhart $1,115.50; Geare and Everstine, $1,159.65; Brady Insurance company, $1,167.95; John J. Stump, $1,193.17 and John G. Wiebel, $1,372.47.

At yesterday's meeting of the mayor and council, the bids were referred to the city attorney and finance commissioner for recommendation.

The contract plan of fleet insurance was inaugurated in 1938 by Commissioner Conlon and over a period of three years the city has saved approximately $2,000. The city at one time carried protection on all vehicles except those of the fire department but under the new setup all motor equipment is included.

Arrangements will be made later for a meeting at which John Haugardy, representative of the Tax Foundation will speak here in Cumberland.

Parade Route Is Changed

Marchers Assemble at the Stadium

All musical organizations planning to participate in the "Americanism Day' celebration, scheduled July 4, at Constitution Park, have been requested to assemble at the Fort Hill stadium at 3 p.m., it was announced yesterday.

Original plans called for the musical groups to meet at the state armory at 2 p. m., but a change was effected because it was deemed inadvisable to have the paraders march uphill to the park. The hour for assembling also was set back.

Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan will be the principal speaker at the exercises which will start at 4 p. m. The Rev. Dr. Hixon T. Bowersox, the Rev. Joyce W. Russell and Rabbi Aaron Lefkowitz also have been invited to speak. William A. Gunter, president of the Allegany County Board of Education is general chairman of the program.

A 15-year-old Dover, Pa., youth who told police he left home to see the United States was being held in the city jail last night as a runaway.

Desk Sergt. Bert B. Browne apprehended the youth in front of police headquarters after a man who had brought him here from Charles Town, W. Va., asked for lodging for a minor.

Physical examinations which have been conducted in recent weeks for pre-school children in Cumberland and throughout Allegany county have been completed, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Joseph P. Franklin, county health officer.

Dr. Franklin's report showed that a total of 769 children have been examined and 690 were vaccinated at clinics conducted by the Health Department. Most of the clinics were held in the high schools of the county.

Children were given a checkup to determine whether or not they had any physical defects and parents were informed so that the defects could be corrected before the children start to school for the first time this fall.

At the time physical examinations were made the children were vaccinated against smallpox with the approval of the parents, who were advised that the law in the Maryland requires that each child must be vaccinated before he or she is enrolled in the public schools of the state. The law also states that every child must present a certificate stating his or her age and that the birth of the child is reported to the health department.

Fixes soft drink licenses at two dollars a place plus a one dollar additional for vending machine.

Driver Fined

Raymond M. Orndorff, of Mt. Savage, was fined $2 yesterday in Police court on a charge of careless driving. He was arrested early yesterday morning in downtown Cumberland by Officers J. J. Condon and J. E. Kelley.

All Animals To Be Purged From Constitution Park

Police, with City Veterinarian Frank B. McCallum at the helm, today will open a campaign to rid Constitution Park of all animals, Assistant Chief John J. Treiber announced last night.

Assistant Chief Treiber cited that animals that wander or are taken into the park will be taken into custody. The park rules declare that no animals shall be permitted on the premises, he said.

The animals damage the property and probably annoy persons who go to the park to get away from the noise of the city, he added.

Earlier this week, a Harrison street man was arrested for horseback riding in the park, but the charge was dismissed after authorities decided that he had violated no ordinance. However, the man was later charged with trespassing on public property, a charge growing out of the first alleged offense. He is slated for trial Tuesday.

Ernest M. Duckworth will assist "Doc" McCallum in the first day round-up. Later, police will take over.

Deception Charge In Postal Case

$500 Bond Furnished By Cumberland Man

A 37-year-old Cumberland man was free under $500 bond today to await action of a federal grand jury on a charge of concealing material facts concerning a claim for indemnity for an insured parcel.

William G. Kegel, of the Spruill apartments, Decatur street, pleaded not guilty to the charge and waived a preliminary hearing when arraigned before United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett. He was represented by Attorney Albert A. Doub Jr.

Postal authorities charged that Kegel received a package containing three dozen neckties from the Haband Company of Paterson, N. J. last October, for which he was to pay $14. The parcel was delivered, they said, but through error, the receipt slip was not signed. The Haband company did not receive payment and sent Kegel several letters, which were never answered, according to the authorities.

Finally, the company submitted a claim to the post office department asking payment of insurance on the parcel. Kegel signed an affidavit that he had not received the goods.

But authorities became suspicious. Investigating, they said they found that Kegel had sold at least ten of the ties to Cumberland people, and the arrest followed.

$17,500 Asked By Young Couple In Accident Case

Two Suits Docketed As Result of Crash In February

An auto accident in February, yesterday resulted in two suits being docketed in Circuit Court asking a total of $17,500 in damages.

The suits were filed by Attorney William H. Geppert representing Mr. and Mrs. F. DePaul Straub, a young married couple living on North Allegany street, who charges that Harry M. and Thomas B. Allen are responsible for permanent injuries received by Mrs. Straub in the February accident.

Mrs. Straub, asking $15,000, contends that Harry M. Allen's reckless and negligent operation of his car caused the accident which resulted in her receiving concussion of the spine, severe nervous shock and chest injuries.

Mrs. Straub, an employe at Celanese, contends that she is partially crippled as a result of the accident and that she had to give up her job which required her to stand while working.

Mr. Straub is suing for $2,500 on the grounds that he had to spend huge sums of money and incurred large debts as the result of his wife's injuries and was deprived of her assistance and the comfort of her society for a long time.

According to the Straub's counsel, Mrs. Straub was riding in the back seat of a car driven by John Chapman of 1626 Bedford road the day the accident occurred. Mrs. Catherine Copeland, 15 South Waverly Terrace, Mrs. Alice Hopkins, 802 Bedford street, and Miss Helen Tahney, 230 Bedford street, were the other occupants in the car.

All are employed at Celanese and were on their way to the plant for the 3 p. m. shift.

According to Geppert, the Chapman car was proceeding slowly along the McMullen highway since there was a heavy stream of traffic.

The traffic was so dense that the cars proceeding in a southerly direction were forced to stop at one point. When Chapman stopped his car, the automobile driven by Allen crashed into the rear of his machine, Geppert said.

Both Mrs. Straub and Mrs. Copeland seated in the back seat, received injuries, Geppert said. They were taken on to the plant, given first aid, and then sent home. Later Mrs. Straub was taken to Allegany hospital, he said.

The two suits name Harry M. Allen as the driver of the car that smashed into Chapman's machine, and Thomas B. Allen as the owner.

Insurance Asked In Vogel Case

Payment Refused, Petitions Declare

Suits against two insurance companies demanding payment of some $30,000 worth of insurance were filed in Circuit Court yesterday by the widow of a well-known Cumberland man found dead in a downtown office building Jan. 12.

The suits were filed by Mrs. Mary Catherine Vogel, widow of F. William Vogel, against the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York and the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

Vogel, 47, a shoe salesman, was found dead the morning of Jan. 12 with a .32 calibre revolver bullet wound in his body. He was found in a washroom a short distance from his office on the second floor of the building at 121 Baltimore street.

"Cleaning gun, went off," was the terse note authorities found in Vogel's office.

Following an investigation, Dr. Linne H. Corson, deputy medical examiner, issued a verdict of accidental death. Dr. Corson hung his verdict on two main pegs which were:

1. That the victim lived for some time after the bullet entered his body.

2. That the victim, who managed to walk to the washroom after the bullet entered his body, could have scrawled the four words in the note.

The suit docketed by Attorney Lewis M. Wilson asks $25,000 from the Mutual Life Insurance Company citing the fact that the policy carried by Vogel entitles his widow to double idemnity provided proof is furnished that death was caused by external, accidental means.

The sum of $5,000 was asked from the Metropolitan in accordance with the terms of a policy purchased by Vogel in 1929.

Payment of the two amounts named has been neglected and refused since January, the petition declared.

Warns Employers of Idle Tax Deadline Today

Employers who are back in their 1939 payments required under State and Federal unemployment compensation laws have been warned that they have until today to settle their accounts without being liable to the maximum rate of 5.7 per cent, and interest.

Officials of the Maryland Unemployment Compensation Board, who issued the dead-line warning, stated that employers who paid their 1939 State contribution before last January 31 were allowed the maximum ninety per cent credit on their Federal tax, while those paying between that date and June 29 are entitled to only eighty-one per cent credit.

Ten New Blue Ridge Buses, Costing $178,000, Begin Operations Today

Ten new air-conditioned buses recently purchased by Blue Ridge Lines will begin operation today over the Blue Ridge route from Washington, D. C., and Baltimore to Pittsburgh, according to A. F. McDonald, general manager of the company.

The new buses were placed on public exhibition for the first time in Cumberland Thursday afternoon and evening near the Fort Cumberland hotel.

Each bus is equipped with automatic air-conditioning equipment, that provides cool air in summer and warm air in winter. The huge no-draft ventilating system, with a capacity to completely change the air in the bus every minute and a half, filters, deodorizes and circulates it through individual grilles under each seat the year around. Thermostatic controls keep the temperature constantly at the proper level.

Buses Cost $17,800 Each

Costing $17,80 each these buses are said to be the most modern on American highways. This luxury coach is powered by the biggest engine that is available for this type of equipment and incidentally, is the biggest bus engine in the country. Each of these new buses weighs over ten tons and carries 200-gallon gas tanks.

The most radical departure from the conventional arrangement of the inside of a bus is the removal of the baggage racks from over the passengers' heads. "Bridges" of eight "spans" on one side of the aisle and of seven "spans" on the other side permits the ten cubic feet space under each "span" to be used for baggage. The passenger's feet then occupy the hollow "abutment" of the bridge and more leg-room is thereby created. All of the old drawbacks and objections to overhead baggage racks are thus obviated.

New Lighting Feature

Another feature of the new bus interior is the full bus length light band in the ceiling over the aisle, eliminating the numerous former "spot-lights," and thus giving a softer and better distributed light inside the bus at night.

Individual arm chairs of an entirely new design are built with a combination rubber and spring cushion and recline to four different positions. More room has been provided between the seats and new type foot rests are provided.

Safety controls and refinements in addition to those present in the previous fleet have been incorporated in this new equipment.

Friends of Demoted City Police Officers Circulate Petition

A petition that has been in circulation for several days, urging the mayor and city council to restore William M. Connell, Raymond Johnston and B. Frank Gaffney to their former posts on the Cumberland Police Department, had gained hundreds of signers last night and probably will be presented to the "city fathers" at their regular meeting Monday morning.

The petition follows on the heels of an order passed by a 3 to 2 vote last Monday, demoting Messrs. Connell, Gaffney and Johnston from the rank of sergeant and reducing their salaries from $140 to $135 a month.

The petition was drawn up by an attorney on the advice of friends of officers who figured in the shakeup in the police department.

Changes in the department are to become effective Monday, July 1, the same day on which the council meets but Police Commissioner James Orr, who introduced the order, will be spending his vacation in California at the time.

Celanese Boosts Indebtedness to Fifty Million

Expansion Plan To Get Consideration, Officials Say

Prior preferred stockholders of Celanese Corporation of America have approved management plans for increasing the company's indebtedness from $20,000,000 to $50,000,000 in order to provide new funds for plant expansion, funding and other corporate needs.

Common stockholders approved these recommendations at a meeting on June 20, but because of the late arrival of proxies from European holders there was not a sufficient number of prior preferred proxies at the meeting to approve the proposals by that class of stockholders.

The new indebtedness could be bonds, debentures or other forms, as determined by the directors.

Company officials said after the meeting no new plans for further expansion of plants or other improvements were in immediate prospect, but that such plans would undoubtedly receive early consideration now that the financing end of the program had been cleared up.

The company in addition to operating a large plant here, has plants at Celco, Va., New London, Conn., Williamsport, Pa., Newark and Arlington, N. J.

All Animals To Be Purged From Constitution Park

Assistant Chief Treiber cited that animals that wander or are taken into the park will be taken into custody. The park rules declare that no animals shall be permitted on the premises, he said.

The animals damage the property and probably annoy persons who go to the park to get away from the noise of the city, he added.

Earlier this week, a Harrison street man was arrested for horseback riding in the park, but the charge was dismissed after authorities decided that he had violated no ordinance. However, the man was later charged with trespassing on public property, a charge growing out of the first alleged offense. He is slated for trial Tuesday.

Ernest M. Duckworth will assist "Doc" McCallum in the first day round-up. Later, police will take over.

$500 Bond Furnished By Cumberland Man

A 37-year-old Cumberland man was free under $500 bond today to await action of a federal grand jury on a charge of concealing material facts concerning a claim for indemnity for an insured parcel.

William G. Kegel, of the Spruill apartments, Decatur street, pleaded not guilty to the charge and waived a preliminary hearing when arraigned before United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett. He was represented by Attorney Albert A. Doub Jr.

Postal authorities charged that Kegel received a package containing three dozen neckties from the Haband Company of Paterson, N. J. last October, for which he was to pay $14. The parcel was delivered, they said, but through error, the receipt slip was not signed. The Haband company did not receive payment and sent Kegel several letters, which were never answered, according to the authorities.

Finally, the company submitted a claim to the post office department asking payment of insurance on the parcel. Kegel signed an affidavit that he had not received the goods.

But authorities became suspicious. Investigating, they said they found that Kegel had sold at least ten of the ties to Cumberland people, and the arrest followed.

Two Suits Docketed As Result of Crash In February

An auto accident in February, yesterday resulted in two suits being docketed in Circuit Court asking a total of $17,500 in damages.

The suits were filed by Attorney William H. Geppert representing Mr. and Mrs. F. DePaul Straub, a young married couple living on North Allegany street, who charges that Harry M. and Thomas B. Allen are responsible for permanent injuries received by Mrs. Straub in the February accident.

Mrs. Straub, asking $15,000, contends that Harry M. Allen's reckless and negligent operation of his car caused the accident which resulted in her receiving concussion of the spine, severe nervous shock and chest injuries.

Mrs. Straub, an employe at Celanese, contends that she is partially crippled as a result of the accident and that she had to give up her job which required her to stand while working.

Mr. Straub is suing for $2,500 on the grounds that he had to spend huge sums of money and incurred large debts as the result of his wife's injuries and was deprived of her assistance and the comfort of her society for a long time.

According to the Straub's counsel, Mrs. Straub was riding in the back seat of a car driven by John Chapman of 1626 Bedford road the day the accident occurred. Mrs. Catherine Copeland, 15 South Waverly Terrace, Mrs. Alice Hopkins, 802 Bedford street, and Miss Helen Tahney, 230 Bedford street, were the other occupants in the car.

All are employed at Celanese and were on their way to the plant for the 3 p. m. shift.

According to Geppert, the Chapman car was proceeding slowly along the McMullen highway since there was a heavy stream of traffic.

The traffic was so dense that the cars proceeding in a southerly direction were forced to stop at one point. When Chapman stopped his car, the automobile driven by Allen crashed into the rear of his machine, Geppert said.

Both Mrs. Straub and Mrs. Copeland, seated in the back seat, received injuries, Geppert said. They were taken on to the plant, given first aid, and then sent home. Later Mrs. Straub was taken to Allegany hospital, he said.

The two suits name Harry M. Allen as the driver of the car that smashed into Chapman's machine, and Thomas B. Allen as the owner.
